INVESTORS NERVOUS

After the long period of reactionary prices in Cobalt stocks it is natural that an amount of nervousness should exist among investors This is the history of all markets, and history also proves that the ones who win are those who have confidence when the majority of their fellows are weak-kneed. To those who are undecided whether to enter the market now or wait, we wish to give our candid advice, and that is: "that it will be a long time before such a favorable opportunity is presented for making money." Buy now Hold until the feeling of depression has passed, and sell. We have a list of buys which will assuredly return profits.
