CHATHAM, N. B., NOVEMBER 5, 1891.

Present Condition of Russia.

In another column will be found a dark and gloomy account of the present condition of Russia, which is said to be infinitely worse than that of France at the time of the breaking out of the first revolution.

Like the government of France previous to 1791, that of Russia in 1891 is a pure despotism tempered by assassination, and like the government of France that consigned to lifelong imprisonment in the Bastille all who were supposed to be hostile to it, the government of Russia sends its disaffected subjects by the thousand to exile in Siberia.

Like the government of France previous to the Revolution, the inhabitants of the rural districts of Russia are suffering untold hardships and dying by the thousand for the want of food.

Time and again have the Nihilists and secret societies scattered throughout the Empire, endeavored to bring about a revolution but every attempt proved a failure owing to their not having the active support of the rural inhabitants of the country.

Now that the great mass of the rural population of extensive districts throughout the Empire are suffering and dying of starvation, it is confidently asserted that the Nihilists will embrace the opportunity of the disturbed state of the country to carry out their plans.

This they will do by heading the starving people in the different districts, and by their acts bring about the revolution they have so long sought to effect.

In the event of a revolution breaking out, its success or failure will depend upon how the Russian army will act when called upon to suppress it.

If they follow the example of the French soldiers at the time of the revolution and refuse to fire upon the people as in all likelihood they will, then the revolution that the Nihilists have long worked to bring about will be commenced.

What the results will be, time alone will determine, but if we are to judge of the present by the past, the scenes of carnage and bloodshed throughout the length and breadth of Russia will equal if not surpass those of France during the dread reign of terror in that country.

The Spirit of the Age.

Of all the faults and failings as well as the sins of the present age the one that stands out prominently above all others is the inordinate desire to be rich and to occupy a prominent position in the world.

Contentment, obedience, and devotion to one's daily duties are no longer looked upon as necessary virtues if they interfere with the accomplishments of this all important object.

The following of the advice given by the old Scotchman to his son to make money, honestly if he could, but to make money, has led to more moral wrecks in the business and financial world than almost any other of the innumerable sins that beset the path of the men of the present age.

From the present appearance of things it appears to be every man's place to "rise in life" and to be, or appear to be, something other than he actually is.

The "rich man" must increase his wealth; the poor man must have more than he can earn, and all must be moving about in a state of discontent and unrest amid the old notions of honor, virtue, contented industry and domestic simplicity has no chance to exist.

To the right as well as to the left of us we find men of position reaching out their hands for something that does not belong to them—whether it be in position, in wages, in bonuses, in extras, or public offices—it is no great wonder that so many of the smaller fry follow suit by the shortest way and transfer their employers' money to their own pockets.

Prosperous State of the German Empire.

If we are to judge of the present state of Germany by the official reports that have lately been published, that country is in a highly prosperous condition.

Notwithstanding the vast number of emigrants that are continually leaving the country, the last census gives the most favorable returns of the rapid increase of its population.

In addition to this the trade, commerce and manufactures of the country are not only in a healthy condition but are rapidly increasing.

The following are a few items from the report. In the year 1871, there were in Germany 7,185 post offices; now there are 235,000.

There were then 3,801 telegraph offices; now there are 15,000.

There were then 21,470 kilometers of railway lines; now there are 42,000.

The cargo transported by German vessels in the same period shows an increase from 6,931,000 to 21,398,522 tons.

The production of Germany has rolled up from one-tenth of that of Great Britain to one-half.

The steel manufacturers of the two countries since 1872 show 772 per cent increase for England, and 1,043 for Germany.

News and Notes.

Patrick McDermott, a McCarthyite, has been returned unopposed for North Kildenny.

It is rumored that all the Farello members will resign their seats if John Redmond is elected in Cork.

A beauty show in Melbourne, Australia, was wrecked by a mob because the style of beauty did not meet expectations.

The crops in Italy are all above the average yield. Italy has not been so prosperous condition for many years.

A quantity of wreckage has been thrown upon the coast of Wexford, Ireland, that is believed to signify the loss of a vessel from Quebec.

About three o'clock in the morning of Friday last, Athens was shaken by a severe earthquake. So far as is known but slight damage was done.

We perceive by our exchanges that Mr. Ballard, Inspector of Schools for Hamilton, Ontario, is at present visiting the schools of the Maritime Provinces.

He was in Halifax the other day and paid a visit to several of the schools of that city.

Prattie rose on Friday night approached dangerously near to Chicago, and the city police and firemen had to go out and fight the flames.

At a banquet in Valparaiso, Chili, Englishmen present declined to drink to the toast of "Destruction to the North American Republic," thus evincing their good feeling toward the United States.

There are so many hoodlums prowling around Ottawa the Telegram says that the government are afraid to leave the public debt out at night for fear they may carry it off.

It is said that King Humbert, of Italy, will pay an official visit to Queen Victoria in March next, on which occasion there will be a review of the Italian and English squadrons at Spithead.

King Humbert will be accompanied by the members of his household and a brilliant staff.

On the morning of Sunday last the London residence of the Prince of Wales was completely destroyed by fire during the absence of the Prince and his family.

The total amount of the damage is estimated at £15,000.

Chili and the United States have positively fallen out, and unless the peace party ties up the United States navy, the edifying spectacle of two republics clashing at one another's throats will soon be seen. Thus do "Liberty enlighten the world."

The trial of Dr. Briggs for heresy was to have commenced yesterday. Such tipsy reports as have been given of the trial and nothing could better advertise the views of Dr. Briggs than having a full report of his trial published in the papers. We have not yet read any of his expressions that are likely to be denounced as heretical except by some extremists, whose dogmas are too absurd to bear the light of this age.

The proposal to raise a Russian fund in England is not looked favorably upon in London. Unless the Queen and the Prince of Wales take the initiative, and the Czar assents to an English committee to administer the fund, the movement will collapse.

The well-known corruption of Russian officials renders it improbable that even if £1,000,000 was subscribed any of the money would be used to relieve the famine-stricken people.

The legal contest over the will of Samuel J. Tilden, who left $8,000,000 to New York City for a library and for other purposes, is being terminated by the decision of the will, and the distribution of a large amount of the property among the deceased testator's heirs.

In spite of the decision against the will of Mrs. Hazard, one of the relatives, will carry the executor $2,000,000 which will go to the beneficiaries of the will.

The telegram from Beas says the pupils of the Lyceum recently went on board the Russian warship Minin, now at port and delivered to her commander a bronze figure representing a French officer holding a sword in his right hand and the tricolor flag of France in his left hand, the figure being a presentment to the Czarowitz by the students of that institution.

The men were almost all without clothes. Roughly, this completed the expedition, striking white men for the first time since May. We opened about 500 or 600 miles of totally unknown country, and, of course, a good deal on each side of the boundary line.

We have got a map of the mountain region, the plan for them is at Washington.

At the back of St. Elias Alps were 50 peaks from 12,000 to 16,000 feet high. All the upper forks of the White river were muffled out, and many signs of mineral, especially copper, were met with.

We saw 55 lakes in one day. A collection of geological specimens was secured, and photographs were taken of everything of interest.

The most important feature of the whole trip was the successful breaking through the St. Elias range, a feat never before accomplished by man. All the party are well. The journey was hazardous in the extreme, and one of great danger at times.

Present State of Russia.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Winter began in Russia on Thursday with the first sharp frost. Living men cannot remember any other year in which this simple announcement meant what it does now. There are literally millions of human beings at the winter, within a six-day's journey of London, who are perishing as a consequence of death by starvation.

Although the censors have forbidden the Russian papers to discuss the famine, the Novorossia ventures the declaration that 20,000,000 creatures are already without food and that a sum four times greater than the recent loan extracted from France is needed to keep the starving people from perishing.

Needless to say, so much snow is forthcoming. Indeed, in the matter of intelligent relief nothing is forthcoming. Valuable figures are given of money raised for the sufferers quite often by eccentric notions of self-denial, which the Novorossia has not been able to take up. No money has been applied. The only intelligence which reaches us from the distant districts is of the famine prices put everywhere upon food by the Russian merchants, and of Russian users and small farmers who are going about trading in the misery of the winter, buying and selling for the heads of poor girls for a few shillings and ripping holes of every portable article, oil iron, pictures, costumes handed down from mother to daughter, and the like, for next to nothing.

In two or three cases the foremost of disaster which is inching under this terrible surface has broken out in riots directed against the Jews. Doubtless there will be more than melancholy aggravations of Israel's miseries during the winter in localities where a few bad Jews, or the slow-witted rabbi of the village, have given the race the lead. But it is nothing to predict that if real and widespread winter results from the present famine, its force will be almost wholly directed against the native Russian officials, landlords, traders and village usurers or kulaks to whom the peasants, as a rule, have no other enemies.

The Russian people are suffering from the effects of the earthquake. The most of the smaller structures in those places were thrown down. In Nagoya one of the finest cities of the empire, fire broke out and completed the work of destruction. It is estimated that not less than 3000 human souls lost their lives.

Reports have been received that the portions of Nippon Island escaped the effects of the earthquake. Owing to the prostration of the telegraph wires full details have not yet been ascertained. A private despatch from Japan says that in the vicinity of the former the recent earthquake shock that the total loss of life may be over 24,000.

A private telegram, dated Higo, a city of 40,000 population, in Japan, received at London on Tuesday, confirms the report conveyed in former telegrams that a disastrous earthquake shock has occurred in Japan. This telegram says a severe

Under provocation is exhausted.

They think this has been reached, and they say the condition of seven-eighths of rural Russia is no infinitely worse than that of rustic France on the eve of the revolution.

They look to see a Moscow revolution of terror begin this winter which will well-off office from human misery the excess of horror begun by the fall of the Bastille. There are not lacking signs of this which is to be ushered in by striking personal events.

The Czar himself sees only too vividly the handwriting on the wall. It would seem as if he dreaded to go back to Russia at all. He is staying much longer in his carefully guarded Danish retreat than he originally intended, and it is said that the preparations which have been making at the palace in Lavrasia for the celebration of his silver wedding on November 9 have been suddenly suspended. This may be more German suspicion, but it is certain that the German authorities have utterly failed to find out whether he intends visiting Berlin or not, and can learn nothing as to the time of his departure or whether he will return by sea or through Prussia.

This strange delay and mystery has been taken on by the Czar, who has refused to create excuses for evading a visit to the German Emperor. Very likely this has something to do with it, but I believe a far more potent reason is that Alexander III. knows the Nihilists are ready once more to attempt to gather him in his country.

It is clear now that his behavior is otherwise than that which he has shown in the past. He has returned to Russia. It may be imagined into what wild excitement such an event would throw Parisians. Unfortunately for the realization of this vision, neither the Czar nor the Emperor are inclined to such the rigors and discomforts of such a long sea voyage in October and November, even if Antwerp were made a landing place to break the journey. They are both too well-to-do to do that.

The thought of the relatively short voyage from Copenhagen to Cronstadt is said to be so dissatisfied to them that they are still likely to choose the land route through Gdynia, even at the risk of affronting the Kaiser by not halting at Berlin.

In the presence of these grave menaces of starvation, civil war and revolution, which threaten the Russian Empire, it is felt to be useless to multiply speculations upon the general European situation. For years it has been a common place of international politics that Russia held the key to this situation. This is true now in a new and startling sense. The magnitude of the domestic evils which are ready to descend upon her fairly area outside Europe. It is no longer what it was some time back. It is no longer what it was some time back.
