BERLIN, Oct. 22. Gairous stories of the Kaiser's weakness for studying the problems of his capital and his people, after the fashion of Handun at Rashid, the Bagdad Caliph, are going the round of court circles now.

It is stated that in order to obtain impartial views of the Berliners concerning many innovations that he contemplates, the Kaiser has occasionally made use of private earniages at night to drive to some frequented spot, where he has alighted and mixed with the crowd. In spite of his characteristic and marked features, he has invariably escaped detection.

A few weeks ago he stood alone at the corner of Potsdamer Platz for over an hour to study means and methods whereby the enormous and consisted traffic there could be best dealt with. With the exception of a single occasion, when Prince Henry accompanied him, the Emperor sallies forth on these
