EVIDENCE TAKEN IN BRUNDAGE CASE

Relative of Victim of Exhibition Shooting Accident Testifies Booth Was Unsafe - Coroner Submits Photograph.

In the police court yesterday afternoon there were three prisoners before Magistrate R. J. Ritchie. Thomas J. Phillips was charged with having had under his control a dangerous shooting gallery on the Exhibition grounds and neglecting to use reasonable precaution to avoid danger, whereby Harry Brundage, a young boy, was shot and killed.

The evidence given was about the same as that at the inquiry before the Coroner Dr. D. E. Berryman.

The Coroner gave evidence that he was summoned to the grounds and viewed the remains of the boy, and that he also saw an opening on the side of the booth. William Quinn, a relative of the young fellow who was shot, and also an expert in the shooting gallery line of business, gave evidence that he visited the gallery before the young fellow was shot, and after shooting fifteen rounds at the target he remarked to Walsh that he had better be careful as the place was one that was dangerous.
