J. W. GARRUTHERS, Canada Steamships Lines president, who resigned because dividends had been started on the common stock of the company.

TALKING IT OVER WITH LORNA MOON

SPARING THE ROD
Careless Ned left her high and dry again the other evening, forgot all about getting the tickets for the Opera; and there were the guests who had invited for dinner and theater party all dressed up in evening clothes and no place to go?
Of course, he beamed his goodnatured smile on everybody as he explained that he had gotten a chance to buy a "peach of a driver from a fellow who was selling his golf outfit, and that the tickets had slipped his memory altogether,—when, when he tried, there were no seats to be had.
The guests agreed that the driver was a beauty, and attempted to spare the hostess by saying that they would enjoy a quiet evening so much more.
Careless Ned is always like that.—he sounds promising, and he's good natured, with a smile that would earn a fortune in oculodid, but when he has to shoulder responsibility he simply ISN'T THERE.
A year ago he had a fine opportunity for promotion—th e over-see at one of the distant plants died suddenly, Ned was sent down to look after things. Instead of taking hold and showing that he could handle the job for them, he bought a horse and spent most of the time galloping round the country. When things had run themselves into a muddle, the president paid an unexpected visit, and Ned spent the first half hour enthusing about his horse and the next writing his resignation. But he is still congratulating himself on getting all that exercise while he had a chance.

It isn't hard to understand his outlook if you hear his mother tell stories of his boyhood, and it's very easy to place the blame for his failure where it belongs. There's a story she tells of the day they went him for baby food he didn't come back for hours, and when he did he was wreathed in smiles and bearing a brand new kite "of course, she says "we were so glad to see him that we didn't mention the baby food."
All right Mother! But unfortunately for your boy the world is not so lenient—it INSISTS on mentioning the baby food—also on punishing the culprit!

CANUCKS MAY BE THERE
Officials at Chicago of the Western Golf Association announced that the American championship set for June 16 at Sunset Club, St. Louis would be an invitation event. This is expected to bring some of the best players from all sections. The last championship was played at the Midlothian Club here in 1917 and was won by Francis Ouimet of Boston.

In London, Ont., at the municipal elections 5,433 voters or under 29 per cent of those on the list, used their ballots. Thirty per cent of the men qualified came out, but only sixteen per cent of enfranchised women cast their ballots.
Influenza has broken out among the horses in Durham county, and a Tyrone farmer lost an animal valued at $300.

"The Better Ole"

'ULLO

'ULLO

By CAPTAIN BAIRNSFATHER and ARTHUR ELIOT

The play from which the film is taken sweeps New York like a cyclone!

THIS is the grand cheer-up picture of the day. It is the happy peace film! There has never been anything like it before. The conflict just closed has produced an epoch-making motion picture that will brighten the folks at home and the boys coming home as no other force or agency can.

THE quickest possible way to forget the troubles now past is to smite them away with Old Bill, Bert and Alf, the three famous musketeers of the British army.

THE BETTER "OLE" is a succession of stinging emotions, with alternating flashes of humor and pathos, connected by the wittiest situations and sub-titles ever seen on the screen.
