The hands are such frail hands, so used to cling
To those that held them closely, fond and strong:
They cannot raise this rude, great cross, and They cannot raise this rune, g. each bring
It patient up the pathway far along
It patient up the pathway far along
It patient up the pathway far along
It should be seen the fields where I have trod
It shuts me from the fields where I have trod
It shuts me from the fields where I have trod
Among the happy flowers, and oh, I pray,
Among the happy flowers, and or repine.

VOLUME XVI.

My Father, I'll not murmur nor repine.
Though far ahead leads on the weary road,
The summer now is so long behind
I do not miss its sunshine: but my load
Is much too heavy. Ah, Thou canst not know
How cruel it is! I pray Thee lighten it.
And then I think I scarce will grieve to go
Even as Thou wilt, and thus my heart submit
To bear my cross.

"Our Father " I have heard the words wri deep In all Thy children's faces, for they shine Like hope up through the eyes that smile or mine.
The old red stamp of pain. So would I pray
Still to walk on with them and seek to read
Thy law. Thy truth, yet in thine own dea

ACADEMY OF THE SACRED HEART, LONDON.

The 21st inst. was a most interesting day at the Academy of the Sacred Heart in this city. It was the day to which the pupils had been looking forward as the end of their year's arduous work and as the time when would commence the season of vacation pleasures. The past year has been one of unbounded success in this admirable institution, and notably, we are pleased to say, in the matter of attendance. To the reputation of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart as teachers of youth we need not refer. The fame of the order is world-wide, and its graduates, no matter what position in life they may be called upon to fill, demonstrate the throughness of its system, not alone in the matter of an ordinary education, the matter of an ordinary education, fitting them most completely for the battle of life, but also, and more important still, we may say, in the training of the heart and the conscience, equipping them in all that is necessary whereby they may gain a bright crown in the life to come. The day was all that could be wished for. The surroundings lent a joy to the occasion. All was happiness, all was joy surroundings lent a joy to the occasion. All was happiness, all was joy in its fulness as the children filed into the study-hall, decked out, as it was, in a manner befitting the occasion. His Lordship the Bishop of London occupied the place of honor, and was surrounded by many of the priests of the diocese. The graduate on this occasion was Miss Regan, daughter of D. Regan, Esq., President of the Agricultural Savings and Loan of the Agricultural Savings and Loan Co. of this city. She is perhaps the youngest graduate who has ever passed from the convent in this city. Ardor for study has been her characteristic, and, coupled with a mind and heart to which Nature has been exceedingly partial, a successful scholastic term and a brilliant graduating course has been the result. She is amply equipped for the voyage of life. amply equipped to the solution of the three days in the future be as bright and as joyful as the period of her school-life is the wish of all who know her. His Lordship the Bishop of London, at the close of the entertainment, complimented the Ladies of the Sacred Heart on the successful scholastic year which was now brought NOTES OF THE EXERCISES. The instrumental duett, three pianos, "Witches' Flight," by Misses Eagan, O'Hara, De Morainville, Hennessy, Smith and Robert, with violin accompaniment by Miss Coonan, was a triumph of musical proficiency and a credit to the young musicians and their skilled and painstaking teachers.

The Salutatory, by Miss Wallace, was full of beautiful thoughts of welcome, charmingly put and admirably enhanced by their perfect rendition.

appreciated by the large and admiring audience.

The cantata, "Curfew Bell," by twelve young ladies, was a special feature of the proceedings. The rare culture and blending of the voices was much enjoyed.

Another beautifully rendered instrumental solo, three pianos, was followed by the "Council of the Muses," a charming conception, gracefully carried out. Twelve young ladies costumed to represent the various classic muses gether and discuss their varied merits. The young ladies in their several roles demonstrated their rich elocutionary power.

LORETTO ACADEMY, BOND

STREET, TORONTO.

The closing exercises of the above institution took place on Friday morning at 10 o'clock, in the presence of the Very Rev. J.

J. McCann. Rev. Fathers Ryan and Rohledar. The rev. gentlemen expressed themselves highly pleased and congratulated the pupils on their numbers and efficiency. Among the fortunate young ladies who carried off the medals were Misses M. Aylward, E. Hodgson, L. Reid and N. Reid. After having wished the children a most happy vacation, Very Rev. J. J. McCann said, he sincerely hoped to have the pleasure of seeing all return in September. The number of prizes won in the different classes reflect great credit on the industry of the pupils and the indetatigable zeal and care of the Ladies of Loretto, whose faune as trainers of youth and whose success as teachers is admitted by all. In September a commercial class will be opened and special attention given to the branches on that course.
