A Whole Nation
 Crazy by Deceit

In his recently published book, "Scrap of Paper; the Inner History of German Diplomacy," Dr. H. J. Dillon, the veteran British foreign correspondent, and one of the leading political students of the day, tells us the secret of the German heart, and explains the nation to British people. This is not the first effort of the kind made by Dr. Dillon. Few non-Germans know Germany so well as he has known it, for he has studied there, lived there, and mingled with leading politicians, professors, soldiers and others until he had secured an understanding of the country and its national aims such as few Germans themselves possessed. From time to time he sent word to the newspapers he represented trying to give warnings against Germany's ambitions, and the plans which he saw slowly maturing. But like others, he was laughed at. Official assurances from Berlin, the benevolent speeches of some noted German in which he expressed the desire that Britain and Germany should be drawn more closely together, and the books written by British pacifists as the result of a few weeks' holidays spent in Germany caught the people's ear. Men like Dillon and others, even men who had their veneration like Lord Roberts, they regarded as well meaning, but nervous croakers.

The German Obsession.

Articles have been written to show from what sources the ideas that have slowly but certainly taken hold of the German people were derived. The German people are the very salt of the earth, that they are the bravest, the most efficient, and the wisest nation of which there is any record; and that it is their duty to evangelize the rest of the world, to impose upon other peoples German "kultur." Dr. Dillon says that this delusion is shared by every burly tram conductor in Germany. It is by no means confined to the Kaiser and his immediate circle. The belief that it is Britain's mission to rule the world is not universally held among British people than is the belief in Germany that Germany's duty is to rule the world. To establish this rule the only way recognized in Germany. That is by force of arms.

Time for New Christianity.

Says Dr. Dillon:—
 "According to the theory underlying this grandiose national enterprise, the forces of Christianity are spent. New labor for the dry veins of decrepit Europe is stored up in German philosophy and poetry. Medieval art has exhausted the traditional forms, but Teutonicism is ready to furnish it with new ones. Music is almost a creation of German genius. Commerce was stagnating in the ruins of old world empires and new German enterprise created new markets for it and infused a new spirit into its trading community. Applied science owes more to German research and ingenuity than to the efforts of all the world besides. And in the race thus highly gifted is deserving of a field worthy of its world-regenerating labors. At present it is cooped up in Central Europe with an absurdly small coast line. Its surplus population has, for lack of colonies to be dumped down on foreign shores where it is lost forever to the Fatherland. For this degrading position, which can no longer be tolerated, there is but one remedy: expansion. But to be effectual it must be expansion combined with Germanization. And the only means of accomplishing this end is for Germany to hack her way through the decrepit ethnic masses that obstruct her path and to impose her higher civilization on the natives."

Deceived by Professors.

The writer calls our attention to the fact that German scholarship has a large share of responsibility for crazing the masses of the German people. Their professors told them again and again that not only are the German people to-day the really great ones, but that in the past they have been the real leaders. These professors have discovered that the great art of the modern Italy, for instance which the rest of the world persists in regarding as Italian, were in reality Germans. Not long ago they discovered that Christ himself was a German. The highest critics have also explained to the Swedes, the Belgians, the Swiss, the Norwegians and the British are all sheep that have strayed from the Teutonic flock, and are destined to be brought back by force of arms. They do not tell their readers, as Dr. Dillon remarks, that the Prussians themselves are not Germans, but that in the ethnic groups of Europe they occupy a place midway between the Slaves and the Teutons, their next of kin being the Lithuanians and the Letts. The Hohenzollerns, however, are Germans, rather than Prussians.

The Hohenzollerns' Work.

It was the Hohenzollerns working upon the other German states and kingdoms that have produced the gigantic German illusion, and the half-mad German nation. Dr. Dillon says that the characteristic traits of the old Prussians are brutal arrogance to those under them, and a cringing servility to their superiors. It is this subservience of the masses that has made the whole system of militarism possible. In the early days of Prussia great bodies of troops frequently changed sides in the midst of battle on the order of their commanders. However much the people had advanced in other respects, they have remained true to the old Prussian characteristics of arrogance and servility. They look upon the Emperor not only as the head of their State, but as the head of their religion, and this religion, while far removed from Christianity, they hold to with the fanatical passion of Moslems.

MAN'S MENTAL ATTITUDE IN WAR

By Arthur W. Korthauer.

This world's war gives man an opportunity to test his own moral and spiritual status. Especially here in America, where we are as yet not within the maelstrom of human slaughter, can observe a man's standard of enlightenment by the view he takes of this cataclysm. The lowest sentiment we hear in such expressions as: "Let them go to it—America will make money out of this murrup." Do Americans want to coin money out of the blood and sufferings of their brothers? No—a thousand times no! We have gone through a period of tears and anguish so let compassion overcome greed.

Some people read the war news in a spirit of sport, very much as they read the baseball news. This war is not a game of baseball. It is a catastrophe. Let us hope we will not get a foul tip between the eyes.

It is not more than natural that a love for the nation from which we spring will make us feel more or less partial to that nation. But let us remember that nations, as individuals, are a mixture of good and bad. No one is perfect. All of these nations that are now at war, have done and are capable of doing great and noble deeds. Do not seek your brother's blood for the kingdom of heaven is within him. "Vengeance is mine," said the great master and lover of mankind.

I have heard a few benighted individuals say: "War is necessary, at certain times, to kill off the 'riff-raff,' when countries become too crowded." When hearing such remarks, I have always wondered why the silly philo-sophers, who can make such a remark, does not begin the game of extermination on himself. Any man who speaks of his fellowmen as "riff-raff" has an undeveloped and cruel mind. It would be well for him to go to this "riff-raff"—as do all the great men—and learn the true meaning of philanthropy. There is but one "riff-raff," and that is the "riff-raff" of the soul which can be cured by enlightenment.

Let us hope that this war will teach mankind a great lesson. May we learn to remove the cause of war, as we must learn to remove the cause of strife between man and man. The basic cause of wars is economic. Man's greed for more than his share of the necessities of life leads to strife and suffering. "Learn the truth and the truth will make you free." Free from what? Free from ignorance. Ignorance is the cause of injustice. Let us learn the true meaning of a higher sphere of life.

NATURE'S CURIOSITIES AND MYSTERIES

After the sun and the moon, the planet Venus, when it is best visible, is probably recognized and known to vastly more people than any other of the starry hosts. Venus is the second planet from the sun. Mercury being nearest the sun, so far as has been discovered. For many years it has been thought by astronomers that there is an intra-Mercurial planet, on account of certain perturbations of the latter; but that may never be established, as such a planet would be so overwhelmed by the glare of the sun. It is even difficult to secure a satisfactory glimpse of Mercury on this account, and the only way that a very clear atmosphere and in a brief twilight when it is morning or evening star.

The mean distance of Venus from the sun is about 67,000,000 miles, and there is no great variation from this, as the orbit is less eccentric, that is, it is less of an ellipse, and is nearer a circle, than that of any other planet. Its orbital revolution is a fraction more than 224 of our days, and follows the sun's annual year is practically 14 days shorter than our own. Venus is about 7700 miles in diameter and has no known satellite.

One of the curious things in regard to Venus is the dispute touching the most identical to those of the moon, which is inevitable with any planet, the orbit of which is between the earth and the sun. So, also, it is with Mercury, Venus has been evening star since the middle of February, for months slowly gaining a higher altitude in the heavens until it reached its greatest eastern elongation, that is, its apparent greatest distance from the sun as we see it, then retrograding toward the sun, the sun, in an almost complete circle, to disappear for a short time, setting and rising almost simultaneously with the sun, to reappear with the new year as morning star and be lost in the superior solar glory which as the central luminary comes each day on the scene.

Not always lost, however. At certain seasons of the year when it is morning star and when the atmosphere is favorable, her eyes may be seen as a pinkish mark, not much of the day in the most brilliant sunlight.

In this connection an amusing incident occurred years ago in Pittsburgh when the general use of natural gas had almost wholly superseded the use of coal and the air was nearly as clear as upon the peaks of the Allegheny mountains. One morning when the sun was several hours high, persons on the corner of Fifth avenue and Smithfield street caught sight of a silvery point in the translucent sky. All wondered what it could mean, as such a spectacle had never before been known in the city newly resurrected from smoke. All sorts of supernatural explanations were offered by the uncomprehending crowd, but no one thought of the simple reality until an amateur astronomer happened on the scene. Then word was soon circulated that it was the planet Venus which all had seen, but none ever before at the hour and in that position. It is Venus inhibited. Nothing is known of the actual conditions on the body of the planet, or that has never been observed. Professor T. J. J. See in the Government service and in England, D. C. and Mars Island, one of the profoundest and most untiring of American investigators, holds that Venus is much more likely to be inhabited by creatures resembling man than Mars. One remains a mystery as much as the other in this mighty domain of conjecture.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Bad Teeth A CAUSE OF CANCER

Constant irritation of any part of the body is now well recognized as an important contributory cause of cancer. One of the forms of irritation which has been repeatedly observed is the constant friction of the sharp edges of bad teeth or of imperfect plates against the sides of the tongue. To be sure, sores on the tongue which in this way do not always become cancerous, but there are wounds from toy pistols always followed by lock-jaw. But there is danger in both cases, and it is as easy to avoid it in the one as in the other. A bad tooth should never be tolerated in any event, and the danger of cancer is only one more good reason for having it attended to. Cancer of the tongue may occur at any age, but it is most common between forty and sixty. Statistics show very clearly that under thirty the mortality of these cases occurred in females, while in latter years males were found to be more frequently attacked. Cancer of the tongue in young subjects is especially fatal. Out of thirty cases there were only three ten months or could not be traced. As one-third of all the cases investigated have been shown to be definitely associated with jagged or decayed teeth or imperfect plates, it would seem that here, at least, is one method of preventing cancer. It is probable that other conditions occurring in combination with the bad teeth increase the likelihood of cancer of the tongue as a result, but the removal of this form of irritation is so simple a matter that deaths in cases of this kind must be mostly charged to pure neglect. Where a sore place caused by a jagged tooth does not promptly heal there is real danger of cancer. If the removal or treatment of the tooth does not relieve the situation and the ulcer continues, prompt operation is necessary, for this form of cancer is quickly fatal.

CITIZEN IN A PRECARIOUS STATE

Once in Fortunate Circumstances—Lost Money in Farmers' Bank—Now in Hospital

A representative of the Farmers' Bank Relief Committee, Mr. Minthorn was in town yesterday, and hunted up David Armstrong, Cedar street, one of the creditors of the Farmers' Bank in which he had a deposit of $1,100.

Mr. Armstrong was found in unfortunate circumstances, being very ill and un cared for. Mr. Minthorn investigated, and Mr. Armstrong was taken to Belleville hospital, for treatment.

"The unfortunate feature is, that his neighbors did not know of his illness. He had been unable to help himself and notify them of his plight. The poor man is in a precarious state."

MORE PRISONERS OF WAR ARRIVE

Margaret Malys, John McCredan, O Butler, Junior Primary—Evelyn Whalen, Louise Bolyas, Blanche Belanger, T. Finnegan, Mary Smith, Wilfrid Flagler, Helen Kerby, Wm. Deacon, Tweedy Black, Marjorie Callahan, F. Scott, George Matthews, Mark Summers, Harold Pascoe, Dorothy Pascoe.

On Sunday afternoon, about seventy-five prisoners of war were landed in Fort Henry from Montreal. Among them were natives of Germany Austria, and a few sons of Turkey. They were brought to the city over the Grand Trunk and were watched by a very strong guard.

The population of the Fort has now been brought to over five hundred, and there are but four of the prisoners left. They are certainly being looked after in a splendid manner.

HE WEARS IT LONGER NOW.

A year or so ago the consumers of Canada were going very largely on the maxim—"Damn the expense." A Canadian shirt maker put the case very aptly just after the war when he said, referring to shirts that he sends from ocean to ocean: "On the whole, the man wears a shirt longer now."

In the heyday of our almost unparalleled prosperity Canadians flung out money for goods that were as much of the other half used when they got them. We had prodigal sons in every household. The best was none too good; the latest was none too modern; the most expensive was none too costly for most of us. And our manufacturers were more careful about hold up we had what we called "prosperity"; which was the most hazardous thing we ever had, because we built a great deal of it on extravagance and treated most of it as a miracle.

We are wiser now. When we buy a $1.50 shirt and find that the laundryman bores a hole under the neckband in five washings we groch over the waste; and well we may. The rest of that shirt is as good as new. To chuck it into the ragbag is sheer and wilful waste. The shakeup that the war brought to our half past century has made us all place a higher premium on actual value. It has caused our buyers to be more careful without being parsimonious; our salesmen to be less careless about foreign competition; our manufacturers to be more particular about giving us the last cent of value in the dollar without regard to profits. It has made us a people less solicitous about mere big business and more careful about good value. It has made us set more value on wages and less upon dividends. It has made us put the load pedal upon actual value for the money we spend for the goods that our manufacturers make, and the soft pedal on the prodigal notion—"Damn the expense."

And this is doing Canada more good than all the big business ever did the country in our days of so-called prosperity for it has resulted in the "Made in Canada" movement.

FARMERS MISSED THEIR PORK

Charge Against Local Man Dismissed—Suspended Sentence for Another Citizen.

A pork episode has figured large in the popular imagination, since Saturday last Mr. James Walker complained to the police that some one had taken from his vehicle in the market, a dressed pig and Mr. Thos Wright missed 64 pounds of pork in the shape of half a hog.

The police investigated the complaints and as a result, two men faced Magistrate Masson, yesterday morning. They were Charles Losee, charged with taking the one pig and half a hog and Luke Losee, with having received the half pig, knowing it to have been stolen.

The latter said he did not know the meat was stolen and offered to pay for it and settle the costs. On that undertaking the Magistrate dismissed the charge against Luke.

Charles Losee paid the costs in his case and made compensation for the pork and was given a suspended sentence for six months as it was his first offence.

The costs and the amount of compensation for the pork reached the figure of $13.65.
