NOTICE.
When a newspaper offers its advertising space at a nominal figure, it is a practical admission of "no circulation." THE KLONDIKE NUGGET asks a good figure for its space and in justification thereof guarantees to its advertisers a paid circulation five times that of any other paper published between Juneau and the North Pole.

A STATEMENT IN ORDER.

The query propounded to Councillor Wilson in yesterday's issue of this paper respecting that gentleman's relations with certain political mountebanks in Dawson, has evoked much interest. There is a well defined impression abroad that Mr. Wilson has been the victim of misplaced confidence. The sensational method which the News adopted of bringing Mr. Wilson's name into prominence in connection with the Slorah murder case indicated a lurking desire on the part of that paper to work some injury to the new councillor. That desire took form in an alleged defense of Mr. Wilson from a charge which had never been laid against him. This defense published with a ridiculous amount of detail must of necessity leave with the general reader the impression that in some way or other Mr. Wilson was concerned in the circumstances leading up to the Slorah tragedy.

It appeared evident at the time, as was pointed out in these columns, that the News was endeavoring to work out some smouldering grievance against Mr. Wilson, and subsequent developments have served to strengthen this opinion to a demonstration.

A short time ago, as was noted in yesterday's issue of the Nugget, a lengthy letter signed by Joseph A. Clarke as Mr. Wilson's representative, appeared in the News. This letter, we are informed on the very best of authority, was wholly unauthorized by Mr. Wilson, which fact must have been known to the News. Nevertheless the letter was published in full, and was accepted as Mr. Wilson's official views upon the various subjects with which it dealt.

Obviously, Mr. Wilson is entitled to have his real views placed before the public in a manner which will admit of no doubt as to their authenticity.

If the small clique who, according to their own claims, and in fact according, thus far, to Mr. Wilson's own tacit acknowledgment, is entitled to represent that gentleman before the public, really has such authority, it is due from Mr. Wilson that a statement to that effect be made.

On the other hand, if he has been misrepresented and placed in a false position, as undoubtedly appears to be the case, it is to the interest of all concerned that the matter be straightened out at the earliest possible moment.

Evidently someone is very desirous of working up a new political movement in France. Every time the fire eating element of that volatile republic desires to get control of things, a great hurrah is made respecting the feasibility of crossing the channel and invading England. This talk doesn't lessen the distance between Dover and Calais one particle and if it helps to keep the French people from suffering from ennui, we don't suppose any particular objection should be entered.

Query: Does the Sun still shine?

Regarding Bresci.

Albert Guidelly, formerly an anarchist and an associate of Bresci, who assassinated King Humbert of Italy, has announced since his conversion in a Newark prison that he will devote his life and possessions to saving his fellow men. He publicly declared on Friday night that he would sell his property and give the money to the Newark Rescue Home.

"The light that came to me in a prison cell has changed all. My soul buried in hate has been resurrected. I am convinced of my past error. The world in which I could see nothing good before is now different to me.

My purpose in life shall be to do good to my fellows instead of evil." Guidelly spoke thus in an address on Friday night at the Rescue Home, No. 15 Spring street, Newark. He then told of his intention to sell his house and grounds at Glen Ridge, N. J., pay all his debts and give the rest of the money and his services to the home.

"I want nothing about me to remind me of my former life," he said. "Besides, I must think of the safety of my family. The anarchists have threatened to kill me. I have been in their councils and know what these threats mean. They stop at nothing. Their methods are so dark they have little fear of detection. The lot is cast; the deed is done."

Guidelly's home is in Bay avenue, the outskirts of Glen Ridge. He fears that in his absence the anarchists, who had frequently met under his roof, will visit the place. The property is worth about $4000.

Guidelly before his conversion spent his time preparing incendiary articles and rehearsing rabid speeches. He frequently brought a dozen companions home with him, and while they were locked in an upstairs room Mrs. Guidelly and the children were working for the neighbors. Suggestions from his wife that he find work brought torrents of abuse against corporations and men who employed labor. "Workingmen are having their lives ground out by relentless capitalists and the wealthy," Guidelly would declare. "My mission is too important to be interfered with by such a trifling matter. We must have a new order of things. Then you and I will be as well off as the man who is now a millionaire. You and the children must meanwhile get along the best way you can."

Guidelly's children were never permitted to go to Sunday school. The mention of religion put him in a passion. He declared there was neither God nor a hereafter. There were busts of Voltaire, Rousseau, Hobbs and other infidels in the house. When the children asked who God was Guidelly would point to these busts and say God was a myth, and these great men had proved he never existed. The father on his return home from prison shattered these busts. He gathered his anarchistic papers and books and for half a day fed them to the kitchen stove.

Mrs. Guidelly was radiant yesterday while telling of the changes that had suddenly occurred in their household.

"This has been the happiest week in my life," she said. "For 13 years Mr. Guidelly has been my husband, but he would never agree to get married. 'What's the use?' he'd say, when I asked him to have a ceremony. 'It's all a farce.' The first thing he did after being converted was to ask me to marry him. We drove to the Rescue Home last Wednesday night with two of the children.

"I cannot tell you how happy I was when we stood before Dr. Osborne, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, of Newark, and he made us man and wife. The two older children were then baptized. The other will be baptized at the mission next Sunday night, when my husband is going to preach. Everything is different now. My husband is kind to the children, and has treated me as he never did before."

Mrs. Guidelly had frequently been compelled by her husband to send some of her belongings to fairs at Paterson, to be sold for the benefit of the anarchist circle to which he belonged. Money raised at these fairs helped to pay the expenses of Bresci when he went to Italy to kill King Humbert; but Guidelly says he was not at the meeting when lots were cast to select the assassin.

Georg A. Simmons, the founder of the mission, who converted Guidelly, is not inclined to accept the offer of his property. He believes that Guidelly, in the interest of his wife and four children, should keep the place.

"I am convinced the man is sincere," said Mr. Simmons. "The charge against him when he was put in prison was trifling. The fact that he professed Christianity did not hasten his release. I have come in contact with thousands of unfortunate men in my work, and I have never felt more certain that I have gained a convert. His fears of the anarchists are well grounded. We shall do our best to protect him and his family."

Should Space Allow

We could furnish you with some interesting reading relative to the store which this illustration portrays. For instance, we might tell you how many thousands of dollars worth of high class clothing has gone through those doors in the possession of satisfied purchasers. Or we might tell you that back of those plate glass windows can be found the only tailor cut clothing in the territory, giving you a description of the goods and the immense wholesale tailoring house that makes them for us. But space not permitting we can at least wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

HERSHBERG

The Reliable Seattle Clothiers
Opp. C. D. Co.'s Dock.

THREE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING.

There is a time of morning
When the jubilant, newborn day
And the opal tints of approaching dawn
As yet seem far away.
In the eastern sky movement,
No glow, but impending change.
The house is filled with echoes;
Familiar rooms look strange.
Slip back the bolts and leave them;
Steal out beneath the sky;
Stand alone in an unknown world
Of awful purity.
Stand alone with folded hands,
Wait for the gift of wings,
Wait to be lifted higher,
Nearer the heart of things!
The heavens are clear and moonlit
Though the moon is on the wane;
The wind that wailed throughout the night
Drops with a sigh of pain.
A vague alarm is creeping
Over the fields and lawn;
Time pauses, night is over,
And yet it is not dawn.
Away down in the pastures
The cattle turn and moan;
All living things are troubled
With a sense of the unknown.
For they with eyes may see now,
And they who question know,
Make the most of the magic hour;
The east begins to glow!
The east is all in tumult,
The charmed hour is past,
For, breaking up the quiet skies,
The day appears at last.
—Olive Molesworth in Chambers' Journal.
