........ As Dr. Blyth stood in the hall a young girl stepped from an adjoining room, inquiring anxiously, "How do you find my father, Dr. Blyth?"

"His condition is serious," he admitted, "but with good care"-She cut short the conventional plati-

"When will he be able to go out

"Not for weeks," emphatically. Her look of anxiety deepened. "What is your father's business, Miss Hall?" "He is manager of the local telephone system and attends personally to repairing and keeping up the line.

"That means a great deal of hard work?" sympathetically. "Yes, particularly in the winter. The circuit comprises nearly 300 phones, and the line extends out into the country in all directions." 'Discontinue it in the winter," unthinkingly.

"The subscribers need it more then," gravely. "Nearly all of them are farmers and depend upon their telephones for communication with the village and with each other."

"If possible, keep from your father During his round of calls Dr. Blyth thought often of the beautiful girl with the sweet, grave voice. He was a stranger in Lindsey and was taking up his uncle's practice. "Fred Hall sick? That's too bad?" was his uncle's comment. "But they'll manage all right," with a country docknowledge of his patient's affairs. "Mrs. Hall is strong and a good nurse. Fidelia understands the husiness thoroughly. Too bad she isn't a

By chance his next call was in the evening. Fidelia met him in the hall as he was leaving. "Do you feel encouraged, Dr. Blyth?" "Yes," kindly, "but his nervous condition is serious. Is he worrying about the business?" "I think not," hopefully. "I hold his position as manager, and that encour-ages him. He has all confidence in my ability." "You are a brave girl," enthusiastically. "You have some one for the outside work?" She hesitated, coloring rosily.

"I-I have the services of a very cometent lineman." "Where is your 'central?" "Here," indicating the room adjoin-

Blyth laughed in open sarcasm. 'I wouldn't care to see the woman Wouldn't she be a terror!"

"Why?" sharply.
"Take your own lineman, for example, Miss Hall. Fancy a woman in his place—driving in all weathers about this sparsely settled country, climbing poles, sitting astride crossarms." He shrugged his shoulders impatiently. "That's worse than being a doctor!"

Afterward he wondered if she would think he disapproved of what she was doing. He hoped not. He considered it entirely commendable for her to manage this business during her father's ess, and the office, being in her own nome, made it seem essentially

He promised himself that he would see her often. He had never before met a girl who seemed to answer so

But as the days went by his glimpse of Fidelia were tantalizingly infrequent. He disliked to inquire for her. He fancied there was malignant satisfaction in Edith's brief answer, "Outwith the lineman."

He ventured another evening call, but Fidelia was in charge of the switchboard, and opportunity for conversa-tion was limited. His half conscious resentment toward the lineman prompted a question as to his competency. "You have to go around with him all the time," he grumbled fealously.

"The lineman is fully competent, but I like to go. I am very fond of"— An imperative call for "central" in terrupted, and the sentence was not ompleted. Blyth remembered it uneasily. Was it the lineman, or had she meant to say that she liked driving in the glorious autumn weather? He grew despondent as the weeks went by, and, no matter how cold or stormy the day, Edith gave the same irritating answer, "Out with the line Then he resolved to settle the affair. He loved the girl. He was sure of himself now. He would boldly make the opportunity to tell her so. She should choose between him and that his adjectives would not have been uttered in Fidelia's presence—lineman!

The thought of her was uppermost in his mind as he drove toward home on a cold, windy day in early spring. "Oh, if only I"— He checked the half uttered words, smiling tenderly as he dreamed a young man's beautiful day dreams of love and life. Ahead of him in the lonely country road he saw a horse and buggy standing by a telephone pole. Instinctively he looked up. "The lineman!" he exclaimed inter-estedly. "I'm thankful Fidelia isn' with him this miserable day!" The man climbed from the crossarn and came down the pole with the swift ease acquired by constant practice. "He's a little chap," thought the doc-or. "Perhaps that's why Fidelia watches him so closely.' The lineman sprang into the buggy, with his coil of wire and bag of tools, driving rapidly away.

"I'll overtake him and speak with him. I-I ought to be halfway decent to a little chap like that"

But the lineman's slim, boyish figure, erect in the lighter vehicle, held the es over an animal that sped along as if aware of his pursuit. Blyth caught a glimpse of a rounded red cheek under the lineman's close cap. A wild thought, a glimmering of the truth, sent the blood to his own cheeks, and he urged his horse on. He reached the driveway at Hall's in time to see the slim figure leap from the buggy and dash into the house. The doctor followed hurriedly.

"Go tell your sister that I must see her at once!" His imperative com-

Ungallant Cromwell. We have heard a great deal lately of the chivalrous consideration shown by men and women in the good old times, but the casual remarks of various writers of those days tend to dispel the illusion, says the London Chronicle. John Aubrey, for instance, writing about 1678, tells us that "King James I.'s court was so far from being civil to women that the ladies—nay, the queen herself—could hardly pass by the king's apartment without receiving some affront." And in one of Richard Symon's pocketbooks there is the following account of Oliver Cromwell's behavior at his daughter's wedding in 1657: "The lord protector threw about sack posset the ladyes to soyle their rich cloaths, which they took as a favour, and also wett sweetmeats and danhed all the stooles where they were to sit with wett sweetmeats."

INDIAN APPLIQUE.

This Work Is Similar to Carrickma-

cross Lace. This is somewhat similar to Carrick nacross lace, inasmuch as the pattern s appliqued on net. The materials however, are much coarser and the work required not so fine, so it is quickly worked, and really charmin things can be produced, such as sofa and pincushion covers, table centers, while a little ingenuity might see its possibilities as a dress trimming. Another recommendation to this work is its cheapness, only rather fine this book muslin and mosquito net-which can be purchased for a quarter or a lit tle over per yard, double width-being needed. The square meshed filet net, however, makes an admirable background and could be appliqued with a design on the muslin, tack this to the background and be very careful at this point or the pattern will slip when working. When this is done run round the catline of the pattern and work with buttonhole stitch or an oversewing stitch, taking this last well into the muslin and using a fairly coarse thread. The illustration shows the second nethod of working. When finished cut the superfluous muslin away very care with a pair of sharp scissors close to the outline threads.

come home tired, cross and fagged, and he won't find relief for all his trials in a caress and a few tender words, as he did before marriage, when they were more of a novelty. He would rather have his dinner, though he may not confess it. When he has been fed and comforted, however, he will be ready for this tenderness, and the fact that he did not feel demonstrative when his stomach was empty will be no sign that he is not still in love.

Believe in the man you take as your life's partner. Be gentle with him. Don't contradict him when he is tired. Let him think he is having his own way in his own house. Feed him with what he likes and laugh at his jokes, Herein lies the secret of a happy home

A Hint Worth Taking. Often that which appears to be a most perfectly tailored skirt will grow to hang with a twist or the plaits will fly back farther on one side than on the other. It nearly always turns out that the stitching upon plaits or gores is run up one side and down on the side opposite. The natural inclination followed even by the women that do the work for good tailors is to stitch down from the top on one side and, turning the skirt most easily in the machine, to stitch up on the other. Instead all of the work should run up or all of it down, preferably down. Without taking this care a skirt may sag, and the greatest amount of fuss-ing and pressing will never get the "warped" quality out of it. Do You Know-That food and drink taken too hot damage the teeth. That a good substitute for a linseed poultice, if no one is at hand to make the latter properly, is to heat a square of cotton wool very hot by holding it before the fire, place it on the skin, cover with oiled silk and bandage on

That skim milk is very nutritious, but nevertheless it is not fit to take the place of "whole milk" altogether in the feeding of children, for fat (cream is the "fat" of milk) is absolutely sary for the proper development of the growing body.

Labor Saving Embroidery. Odd new initials have just been invented, an ingenious way of getting an effect without having to do the work usually associated with that effect. These are letters-big or little affairs, depending upon what you want-them to mark—already embroidered, ready to apply to towel or sheet or napkin. A few careful stitches set them firmly in place, and the tip ends are embroidered in a soft cotton, the same sort as the initials themselves are done with.

New Lamps For Old. Almost every lamp needs boiling oc-casionally when the light burns dimly, and no attention to oil or wick will make any difference. Take the lamp apart, remove the

There are bitter complaints of the mability of the American railroads to handle the freight that is pressed upon them. Railroad men have many xplanations. Some of them say the igine and car works are unable to fill the orders for rolling stock that have been given them. Others talk of the need of more trackage and etter terminal facilities.

It is interesting to observe that the conditions complained of by American shippers exist in other countries. They are found in England. A correspondent of the London Times says: "So inadequate are the resources of some of the English railway companies that many colleries are losing time, and steel works are being shut down in the Midlands, notwithstanding heavy order books. notwithstanding heavy order books, because the railway companies are unable to move the output from the pits or to supply the furnaces with fuel." Matters are not quite so bad fuel." Matters are not quite so had as that in the United States. In view of all the facts it must be admitted that the men who manage the Amerian railroads are not the only sinners. They seem to have been to a certain extent the victims of conditions which abbeins in the conditions of the conditions conditions which obtain in both Europe and the United States.
