THE DOPE.

The Wanderers, with their "dud" team on, gave the Cubs the fright of their lives last night when, Hall holding them for six hitless innings, Burton managed to hit one right to the shortstop's toes. The evening was so uneventful in his territory up to this point that Laird Orr was hardly prepared for such an unexpected happening, and after booting and juggling the ball several times, finally succeeded in making a wild peg to first. Then Britt and Hartnett both smashed Claude's offerings to deep centre. This started the fireworks, and before the Cubs planned to terra firma again, the Hartnett crew had showed 5 runs across the plate. Graham Balfour, who was attired like the sheriff of Lone Gulch, was the white horse of his team when, with a man on second and third and one run necessary to tie up the score, he stepped up to the plate. He proved to be a veritable "Casey at the Bat," however, when after letting two sweet ones pass him which were not his style, vainly smote the ozone at Hall's inshoot. Smith, with his peculiar slow ball, seemed to fool most of the Cubs' batters, and he was heading for a couple of clever and daring plays only to find his baseman asleep at the switch. Herb Power made his first appearance for the season attired in a Wanderer uniform, and succeeded in pulling down a nice fly after which he blushing retired on his honours in favour of Balfour. All the fans were glad to see Orr back after his two years' active service with the American forces, but he seems to have lost his batting eye, for his usual two baggers were conspicuous by their absence. Hall got in good work for six innings, having 15 strikeouts to his credit, but the Wanderers found him the seventh and lammed him for four hits.

NEXT GAME.

The next game will be played on Tuesday evening, when the B.I.S. will try conclusions with the Cubs. After this clash only the final game of the series—Wanderers vs Red Lions—remains, which, if the Hartnett crew succeed in winning, will necessitate a play-off with the Cubs for the championship.

BUT DON'T GO.

Bill: "Yes, I was up to the big game, so I just dropped in here for a 'kiss and a cup of tea' as they say. Nabel: "Awfully glad you did; but the tea isn't quite ready yet."

THE BURGLAR.

"I told you so!" said Abner Strong, who runs the general store; "I always knew that kid was wrong. And crooked to the core. His folks all thought he was so smart. When he was playing ball and bragged about his early start. The praise he got, and all."

"He's in St. John's on some dern club, the 'Telegram' from that place. Says yesterday that he got flub. And went and stole a base. I don't know what them bases cost. You can't fool me, not much, by gee! I reckoned all along. A kid so slick would turn some trick!" Said good old Abner Strong.

Lady Beatty in Hard Luck.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—An income of $200,000 a year is supposed to insure one from fear of the wolf at the door, but not if one lives in England, and owns property in the U. S. Here is what happens in the case of Lady Ethel Beatty, wife of Admiral Sir David Beatty, of the British Navy and daughter of the late Marshal Field.

The British Government takes 50 per cent of her income on the ground that she is a British subject, being married to a Briton. And the United States takes 60 per cent because her property is in America.

Her income is known to be between $200,000 and $300,000 a year, because it is only on incomes of that amount that 60 per cent is levied.

Say, then, that Lady Beatty draws $200,000 a year from her property. The British Government takes $100,000, the American Government takes $120,000, and her income is $20,000 less than nothing at all. If her income amounts to $280,000, the British Government takes $140,000, the American Government takes $168,000, and Lady Beatty pays $28,000 more than she gets.

"Every American living in England faces the same condition," said Arthur Huerley, of the Northern Trust Company, which handles Lady Beatty's finances. "There is no way out of the laws of either England or America by which she can escape the penalty."

"We have treaties with most countries whereby if one pays part of the tax in one country it cannot be duplicated in the other; but with England, Japan, Australia and New Zealand there is no such treaty, and the full tax is collected in both countries."

She Sells Correct Time.

Selling time is the very unusual business of Miss Belleville, an English spinster. It was a strange incident that turned her to such a vocation. At the death of her father she found, among the many things she had inherited from him, a very valuable clock. Her father had been an expert watchmaker, and he had built and regulated this clock to keep time like a chronometer.

It is an unusual timepiece, the hour-hand making its journey around the face but once every day, the numbers running from I to XXIII.

Accurate as Greenwich. The clock became the exponent of accuracy. It was regarded by the residents of Miss Belleville's home town as accurate even as Greenwich Observatory. Which is situated not far from her home.

For many years the people of the little town set their clocks and watches by the Belleville timepiece, and when Miss Belleville became its owner she turned it to profitable account by charging a small fee for this service. The clock produces quite an income. If every man who stops in front of a jeweller's chronometer every day to regulate his watch should pay five cents, it is easy to figure what an income this would mean.

Household Notes.

Bacon is much more crisp and evenly done when cooked in the oven and it does not require turning. Sliced banana added to the white of an egg and beaten stiff makes a good substitute for whipped cream. Bread crumbs will keep better when put into a glass jar with a piece of cheesecloth tied tightly over the top. Refrigerator doors should always be latched tight. If they are half closed, ice is wasted and the refrigerator is not so cold.

Royalty's Clubs.

KINGS DON'T OFTEN USE THEM.

The Prince of Wales has lately been made a member of the Savage Club. He has also permitted himself to be elected to the Plymouth Yacht Club, and it—as is hoped—spends a part of his time at his pretty house, Tor Royal on the Moor, fifteen miles from Plymouth, he may perhaps make practical use of the latter club.

The King's father, as well as King Edward, were both members of the Savage. King Edward was a most clubbable man, and during his long tenure of the title of Prince of Wales, was frequently seen in the various London Clubs to which he belonged. He, however, like his son, our present king, gave up his clubs on coming to the throne, though in a few cases they both allowed their names to be retained upon the lists.

The last king to use his clubs after he ascended the throne was George IV.

Of all London clubs the one that is pre-eminently the Royal Club is the Marlborough. Its membership is only five hundred, and in King Edward's time, it was an unwritten but strictly observed rule that no one should be admitted unless he was known and approved by His Majesty—or rather by His Royal Highness.

In the writing-room is the small table which King Edward always used, and which is preserved just as it was in his day.

The Army and Navy, better known as "The Rag," is one of the handsome club buildings in London, has 2,400 members, and was under the patronage of King Edward. Napoleon III, in his earlier days, before he became Emperor, was a member of this club, and so was the late Tsar of Russia.

Peculiarities of Sleep.

A person absolutely without sleep for nine days will die. Sufferers from insomnia sometimes maintain that they have gone for weeks without sleeping, but it has been proved that they actually sleep without being aware of it. At a certain point sleep is inevitable, no matter what the bodily condition, the alternative being death.

A method of taming wild elephants is said to be that of depriving the animals of sleep when first caught. In a few days they become practically spiritless and harmless. The brain of the elephant is held to be more highly developed than that of any other wild animal; but, of course, as compared with a human brain, can be easily fatigued by new impression, and so made dependent on sleep.

The wild elephant in his native jungle is said to sleep very little—a further point of the theory of the universal ratio of sleep to intelligence.

Put Webbed Gloves On AND SWIM LIKE A DUCK.

How would you like to be able to swim as fast as a duck, and with a little effort, with webbed hands and feet to push your way through the water? It is not at all impossible, now that Dr. A. Kandor Zawadzki, of Honolulu, has invented his swimming glove. As can be imagined, the webbed gloves make a veritable duck's foot out of human hand. When swimming, the gloved hand is spread out at each backward stroke and closed each time the hand is drawn forward. According to the inventor, a swimmer equipped with the duck-like hands can not only outdistance other swimmers but the hands enable him to stay up for hours with slight exertion.—Popular Science Monthly.

Stropping a Razor on the Fleshy Part of the Hand.

The finest strop for a razor is the fleshy part of your hand below the little finger. For eight years I have used no other for razor blades. If it is a safety razor blade grasp it between the thumb and first finger of the right hand and strike finger nail and blade at the same time on the fleshy part of the left hand. If you will do it slowly at first the motion becomes automatic. I put a little vaseline on the cutting edge. This keeps the blades constantly in first class condition.—John W. Shank.—In Popular Mechanics.
