CHAPTER XIV.
THE ROAD TO LONDON.

"Ride in my cart, miss!" said the old man, stopping his horses and staring at her. "Ride in my cart! Bless my soul—what do you want to ride in my cart for?"

"I—I have lost the train," she said, quickly.

"Lost the train!" said the old man, too surprised now to do more than repeat her words. "Lost the train! And you want to ride in my cart. Where are you going now?"

"To London," said Iris.

The old man nodded.

"I'm going to London," he said. "Yes, that's right enough, but—she paused, and looked at her with rough, but not unkindly, scrutiny—"where have you come from?—the great house there?" and he jerked his whip toward the Revels.

"Yes," said Iris, helplessly.

"Hur!" said Iris, as he eyed the bag and her clothes; "one of the servants, I suspect. Got the sack, eh?"

Iris stared at him perplexed.

"Lost your situation, I mean," he translated.

"Yes," said Iris, with ill-concealed bitterness.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, "I see. Well, they might have turned you out at a more reasonable hour. And you've lost your train? Well, I suppose I must give you a lift."

He stepped on the shaft and took the lantern from his hook and carried it behind the cart. "Wait a minute. I'll be a bit more comfortable for you."

He rearranged the cart, and a bundle of straw; then he helped her in. He had a seat among the bales and she sat inside a bed of a heap of straw.

"Is it rougher than a first-class railway carriage?" he said, with a laugh, "the best of riding is better than the best of walking, miss. There's a rug there on that box if you should feel cold. Are you all right?"

And as Iris, thanking him, sank down on the clean, sweet-smelling straw with a deep sigh of relief and weariness, he roused his horses, and she was started on his way toward London, and in a few minutes the lights of Knighton Revels faded from her sight.

Lord Clarence and Mr. Barrington sat talking until nine o'clock. Clarence had told Mr. Barrington of his offer.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Satisfying and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness, cough, phlegm, looseness, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, mix 2½ ounces of Pinex into a quart bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a specific and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your grocer for 2½ ounces of Pinex with full directions, and don't accept any cheap imitations. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded. The Finex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"So I was," said Heron Coverdale, half guiltily; "but I am back again, you see! The fact is I have taken rather a fancy to this place, and he paused and smiled in rather an embarrassed fashion, then his face grew grave. "But what is the matter?—for something is the matter, I see!"

"Have you not heard?" said Mr. Barrington, gravely.

"Heard what? I only landed an hour ago, scarcely that!"

"Mr. Knighton of the Revels is dead!" said Mr. Barrington, solemnly.

Heron Coverdale fell back a step in shocked surprise.

"Dead! Good Heavens! When?"

"Nearly a week ago!" said Mr. Barrington, "He died quite suddenly, and—"

"He stopped—I am looking for his daughter!" he added, for concealment was useless.

"Looking for his daughter!" echoed Heron Coverdale, his handsome face still, wearing its startled expression.

"Looking for—but why? Is she lost?"

"She is," said Mr. Barrington, gravely.

"Lost!—lost! What do you mean by lost?" demanded Heron Coverdale.

"How can she be lost?—she, so well known, the heiress to the Revels?"

"She is not the heiress," said Mr. Barrington.

"Not the heiress! How is that?" exclaimed Heron Coverdale, walking beside him, for Mr. Barrington had gone on quickly.

"There is no will," replied Mr. Barrington.

"No will; then—then who is the heiress?"

"Lord Heron Coverdale!" said the old lawyer, grimly.

CHAPTER XV.
COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

"I, her to Knighton and Beverley!" exclaimed Lord Heron, staring at Mr. Barrington in blank amazement.

"Yes," said Mr. Barrington, "you are heir to Knighton and Beverley. Walk with me to the police station, my lord, and I will tell you all about it."

Lord Heron listened like one in a dream.

"Great Heavens!" he exclaimed, shocked and pained. "Godfrey Knighton not married, and the poor girl has fled! Surely there must be a will in her favor!"

"There is none," said Mr. Barrington, gravely; "as I say, my opinion is that he destroyed it. This man Ricardo hints as much—not that any reliance can be placed upon anything he says."

"It is an extraordinary story," said Lord Heron, "and to think that I met the man here and lunched with him. He is in jail, you say?"

"Yes, and will be transported," said Mr. Barrington. "But as to his assertion that there was no marriage, and Miss Knighton being illegitimate, I fear we shall find it true. The woman, Felice, can be relied upon, and she admitted the truth of the story with the greatest reluctance; in fact, not until Miss Knighton compelled her."

Lord Heron waited outside the police station while Mr. Barrington went in to state the fact of Iris' disappearance, and set inquiries on foot for the missing girl, and a storm of emotions whirled through the young earl's brains.

If this were true, he was not only Earl of Coverdale, but one of the richest men in England! No need any longer to wander about the world because he had not money enough to purchase a settled abiding place. He was master of Knighton Revels, and Lord of Knighton and Beverley! The thrill that ran through him at the thought was pardonable, though the next moment he felt ashamed of it.

THIN, FADED HAIR NEEDS "DANDERINE" TO THICKEN IT

35 cents buys a bottle of "Danderine." Within ten minutes after the first application you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping your hair to grow long, thick and luxuriant. Girls! Girls! Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, thin, scraggy. A single application of delightful Danderine will double the beauty and radiance of your hair and make it look twice as abundant.

"What!" he murmured, jerking his straw hat on to the back of his head. "I owe it all to this poor girl's unmerited misfortune? At any rate she shall find a friend in me, and not a mere supplanter. Poor girl!"

Then his thoughts flew back to a subject upon which they had been dwelling for days past with a persistence which would permit of no denial. That beautiful creature who had saved his life, and who had parted from him so strangely; he had not dared to tell her all that his heart ached to express, had not dared because he was poor, and he felt, somehow, that she was powerful and rich.

He would find her out now, and go to her and tell her that he loved her. Yes, loved her! There was no mistaking the desire and longing which had rendered him unhappy and restless by day, and sleepless at night.

He loved this girl whose very name, even, he did not know.

How great a joy it would be to him to discover her, and say, "I am poor no longer, but rich, richer even than most rich men! I lay myself, and all that I possess, at your feet! You saved my life, take it and me!"

Would she listen to him—accept his love? It was an anxious question. Why had she broken from him when they had last parted as if he had done her some injury? He was thinking so much of this young girl that he had almost forgotten the great good fortune which had befallen him, when Mr. Barrington came out of the office, and addressing him, recalled him to the strange and extraordinary situation.

"Well!" he said, anxiously.

"She is not here," said Mr. Barrington; "I saw the policeman, who has just come off duty on the high road, and he is confident that no one answering to Miss Knighton's description has entered Glosopp this evening."

Just Folks
Favors
Favors are easy to get, for favors are easy to ask. But who sets the hand of another to work must share with another the task.

"Help!" is the commonest cry, it begins with the dawn of the day, for few have the courage to stand up alone and go to the end of the way.

A favor will open the door, but the proof of your worth and your might.

Is to battle your way all alone to the top and claim the reward as your right.

And what if the world doesn't see the hands that have favored you so. Through the days and the weeks and the months and the years the truth of your glory you know.

Who rises by favor shall find with regret till he goes to his grave that the comforts unearned he has taken from men have forced him to live as a slave.

Oh, better it is not to rise to the heights where life's glories are known. Than be carried on high by the hands of your friends and build no success of your own.

If your oven gets too hot, put a pan of cold water inside and keep door shut.

In Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will find a treatment which is both quick and thorough.

Mr. C. E. Raymus, Lindale, Alta., writes—

"I was a great sufferer from kidney disease and lame back for more than a year. A friend of mine one day told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and seeing upon his advice I used them. After I had taken one box I felt better, so I continued until I had used five boxes. By this time I felt as well as strong as ever, and am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone suffering as I did."
