The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER XXII.

"Heaven grant that I have done the right thing!" said the general to himself. "I believe men make a dreadful muddle of everything of the kind; but I hope for the best."

Sir Basil's thoughts were far more tumultuous. He admired Leah exceedingly; but he had never dreamed of marrying her. He had felt no tendency whatever to fall in love with her. She had always seemed to him beyond his reach. He remembered all that the duchess had told him of the offers of marriage she had received; and this beautiful girl, who might have been Countess of Barberry, loved him secretly!

It was some time before he could collect his thoughts, and then a thousand memories filled his mind—of looks and words, the true meaning of which he had not understood until now. How blind he had been! He had said that a man would understand even the faintest signs of a woman's regard; but had he understood?

The beautiful, proud face rose so clearly before him. He had not thought much of marriage; but it appeared marvellous that he had but to speak one word and she would be his. He was not in love with her, but his heart beat when he thought of her. He was one of the least mercenary and most generous of men; he would have scorned the idea of marrying for money; but it was not unpleasant to think of the immense wealth that would be his if he wedded Leah Hatton. He could make good use of it. Would any one believe that this grand, imperial creature cared enough about him to shed tears? He was touched, but his vanity was flattered; it raised him in his own esteem that he should all unconsciously have won the love of such a woman. He would cultivate her society more, and, if he found the general's assertions to

A Stitch in Time

Quick action is the only hope when kidney disease appears.

There is a whole train of dreadfully painful and fatal ailments which soon follow any neglect to get the kidneys right. Among others are rheumatism, lumbago, Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure.

In Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will find a treatment which is both quick and thorough.

Mr. C. E. Raymus, Lindale, Alta., writes:—

"I was a great sufferer from kidney disease and lame back for more than a year. A friend of mine one day told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and acting upon his advice I tried them. After I had taken one box I felt better, so I continued until I had used five boxes. By this time I felt as well and strong as ever, and am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone suffering as I did."

be true, he would ask her to be his wife.

As he returned to the house, calmer in mind after this decision, it seemed to him a strange coincidence that he should meet the duchess and Miss Hatton. The duchess spoke gayly enough; Leah's face flushed crimson, and a thousand welcomes shone in her dark eyes. For no other man living would her face have so changed and brightened. On the previous day Sir Basil would not have noticed it; now it struck him.

"We are going down to the beach," said the duchess. "Will you accompany us, Sir Basil?"

"With pleasure," he replied. "I have been there once this morning, and very beautiful the sea looks."

They strolled on to the yellow sands, where the waves rolled in briskly and broke into sheets of white foam, and sat down to watch the incoming tide. In one hour there was unutterable happiness; Leah had read something in Sir Basil's face which she had never seen there before. In another heart there was unutterable perplexity; for Sir Basil saw that the general had not been mistaken. Reading all that passed now by the light given by his words, there was no doubt but that Leah loved him.

"They are beginning to understand each other," thought the duchess, as she listened to the two voices. "It is possible that it may all come right in the end."

The two hours they spent that morning on the beach seemed to Leah to pass like two moments; and her face grew so beautiful in her new-found happiness that it dazed Sir Basil when he looked upon it. Her sister Hettie, her father, and all the horrors of her past life were forgotten in the bright present.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Duchess of Rosedene had decided to give a grand fancy-ball.

"Let me design a costume for you, Miss Hatton," said Sir Basil. "I once went to a fancy-ball at Naples, where each lady was dressed to represent a flower. It was the prettiest picture imaginable. Instead of Marie Sturats, La Vallieres, Jeans of Arc, and Pompadour, we had a room full of impersonations of beautiful flowers. I remember the 'Heartsease'—a tall girl, dark, pale, and handsome; dressed in velvet of the color of a purple pansy, with heartsease in her hair and all over her dress. The 'White Lily' was another great success. I wish you could have seen the 'Geranium'—it was a most charming costume. Now I have two ideas for you, Miss Hatton—that you represent either the passion-flower or primrose."

"I will not represent the passion-flower," she said. "I was very fond of it—I am now—but it has strange memories for me."

She could not forget that it was amid the passion-flower sprays that she had first seen him. She would not wear them to dance in.

"Very well," he said, "that is settled. I must sketch a primrose costume for you. That will suit you best—the coloring is so delicate. You must have a pale primrose-colored silk that will fall in soft folds, with fine webbing; you must have primroses in your hair and round your neck and arms, and a garland of the flowers round your waist; and the folds of silk and lace must be fastened with bunches of primroses and green leaves."

Leah laughed lightly. She was delighted that he should take an interest in her dress. He seemed to watch her looks and listen to her words with keener interest. His manner was changed.

"You speak with the authority of a Worth," she replied.

"I assure you that such a costume would be most picturesque," he said. "Wear it to please me."

Over her face rushed a wave of hot color. She would do anything to please him. He must have read the thought in the eyes that dropped before his.

"I will have the dress made just as you wish," she said quietly.

"I am sure that you will be charmed with it," he told her. "Yours is just the kind of coloring that pale primrose will suit."

The shy, happy eyes looked into his and Sir Basil knew that every word the general said was true.

The duchess was delighted with the young baronet's suggestion.

"What a pretty idea!" she said. "I am sure I shall like it much better than all those stiff costumes and impersonations of queens and heroines. I have to thank you for a very pleasing inspiration, Sir Basil."

Everything conspired to make the ball a success. The great heat had passed; the sea-breeze that came through the woods was full of fragrance; the moon was bright; there were flowers everywhere, and the trees were brilliantly illuminated with lamps. When the guests were tired with dancing or wanted to seek the fresh air, they had but to cross the conservatory into the beautifully illuminated grounds, where the lamps, the sparkling fountains, the trees all silvered by the moonlight, and the picturesque groups of guests made up a scene never to be forgotten.

The duchess was charmed. Leah was the belle; she never looked so beautiful. The pale, lovely hue of the primrose suited her to perfection. There was about her this evening a certain consciousness of her own beauty; those who looked at her noticed her flush of delight, the gleam in the dark eyes, the smile in the perfect lips. The general had noticed her with admiring eyes.

"If Sir Basil does not fall in love with her to-night, he has neither taste nor reason, neither sense nor heart," he said to himself. "What more could man desire? Who is more worthy of love than she?" He felt happier presently, for he saw that Sir Basil was more attentive to her.

The baronet had begged her to give him the first waltz, and then he asked for another. He was beginning to feel the intoxication of being loved by a beautiful woman. He saw the most eligible men in the room crowding round her. He knew there were some present who would give anything they possessed for the smiles, the brightness she lavished upon him, and which were his without asking. It was something worth living for, an intoxication of vanity, a triumph, to know that this superb woman loved him; he had put to speak, and her whole face changed for him. She loved him—he said; it over and over again to himself—this woman, whose smiles were so hard to win. He watched her, he danced with her, falling every moment more and more under the spell of her beauty and charm.

"You are tired," he said, when the dance ended and she leaned on his Mountain Side Falls.

PLAIN BECOMES A PLATEAU.

While the peasants were working in the fields at Arvier, Switzerland, just outside Villeneuve, at the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva, a huge slab of the mountain side, 1,000 feet high and estimated at 1,000,000 cubic yards, fell with a terrific crash.

Fissures having appeared in the rocks owing to quarry workings at the foot, the inhabitants had been warned to leave their dwellings in the neighbourhood, and consequently no loss of life is reported. The greater part of the rock buried itself in the soft soil of the plain, thus causing an upheaval of land for a radius of several hundred yards. Several houses and sheds were thrown forward and deposited at fantastic angles.

Peasants working 200 yards away were alarmed to see the ground rising underneath them, and they rushed helter-skelter for safety.

A stretch of land, formerly a flat plain, is now a plateau rising in parts to a height of 50ft.

NO RELIEF.

There a statesman swing their battle-axes, and cry "Give us the snaps, and we'll cut down the frightful taxes that cause your anguished yaps. Economy will be our motto, our watchword, if we win; and if you vote, friends, as you ought to, relief will soon begin."

When I was young and fresh and tender, I heard that stirring call; then statesmen came in pomp and splendor, and hired the village hall; they told us rubes how we were bearing the burden of the day; when they the offices were sharing, our griefs would fall away. Thus did they in the distant ages defend the public weal; and still I hear the windy sages put up the same old spiel. And taxes still are mounting, mounting, the burden's far too big, and we're forever busy counting the bucks we have to dig. The tax collectors, hot and panting, are always at our heels, and still the statesmen, wildly ranting, put up the same old spiel. And it is strange how we surrender to every wordy kick, and think we'll save some legal tender by helping Tom or Dick. Experience has tried to teach us that statesmen merely joke; and when the tax collectors reach us they always leave us broke.

How the Process of Ironization Makes Yeast Doubly Effective

While Science admits that yeast is of wonderful value in building flesh, clearing the skin, and increasing energy, it is found that yeast alone is not enough to bring 100 per cent results. For while yeast contains certain vital elements—lacking in diet, yet essential to health—experiments prove that some other agent is needed in order to quickly CONVERT these important yeast elements into new firm tissue, energy and health.

Everyone knows the great value of iron in changing our food into living cells. So working on this problem, our scientists finally discovered the amazing process of ironization—the scientific process which enables you to derive from yeast ALL of the wonderful benefits it holds for you.

The Only Yeast that is Genuinely Ironized

This remarkable process of ironization is embodied ONLY in IRONIZED YEAST, the one scientifically correct yeast treatment. IRONIZED YEAST is superior, therefore it is widely imitated. You are cautioned against accepting cheap inferior imitations, which in most cases are merely mixtures of ordinary yeast and iron. Always insist upon the genuine IRONIZED YEAST. It is the only way you can be sure of getting the best.
