For the season of 1905 Messrs. Norris & Rowe have decided to step into their proper place in the ranks of the big circus owners of the world. By earnest endeavor they have now laid secure the foundation for the perpetuating of an honorable name to their succeeding generation, a name they hope will live forever as synonymous for all that is good and worthy in the realm of the white tents. For the past seventeen years they have been very successful in building up their fortunes, until at present they have established an institution that ranks fourth in size with the greatest amusement enterprises in the world. The profits accumulated in all these years have been taken from the banks and expended for complete new equipment for their "Greater Circus," and the latter will be found to be all that the name implies. Mammoth new tents have been purchased; a parade of all new special features will be given. Sensational riding acts by male and female expert equestrians. A group of Japanese swordsmen will be shown. Marvelous and daring are the flights through the air of the aerial gymnasts, the feats of cleverness of the equilibrists, posturers, jugglers, leaprs, vaulters, the skill of the wild animal trainers, and the interest bound to be aroused by the new double me-
