This gigantic Piano deal for THE WILLIAMS PIANO CLUB was for TWO HUN.

DRED PIANOS. There is an average of 15 Pianos to a carload. This means that it will take fourteen solid carloads of Pianos to fill this single order-or one trainload. The freight alone will amount to over $800. Sixty-two dollars and over a carload, or over $800 for the train. Two hundred Pianos means something. Two hundred chairs of a kind may not mean so much.

Two hundred suits or hats, or this or that may not mean such a big deal-but 200 Pianos MEANS SOMETHING. In dollars and cents, it is a deal involving over FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS, considered at their selling value. It is a deal for as many Pianos as lots of good Piano firms will require for two entire years' business. It is a deal that works more advantages to Piano buyers both in SAVING MONEY and in TERMS OF PUR-CHASE than any other Piano deal of which we have any knowledge.

What the Savings of the Williams Piano Club Is to You-the Buyer

The Pianos we bought in this gigantic deal are $350 Pianos. There are 200 of them. We are going to form a Club of 200 members to purchase them. This big club will act like one person, each member enjoying the same advantages and the same privileges. All will secure the same price, the same terms, and the same conditions. The Club price will be $257.50, or a saving of $92.50 in money—to say nothing about the liberalities of terms and conditions of sale. This $92.50 is an actual engine of $00.50 that can be used in an actual saving. It is not an assumed or "make believe" saving—it is a real, actual saving of $92.50 that can be used in

It's the power of numbers that makes this saving price possible—just as the railroad can afford to charge less when Empire Awakening Slowly From Tranquil Sleep of Centuries.

TRADITIONS LONG LIVED

Cult of Ancestors and Modified Form

Peking, Chilli Province, China, Nov. 16.-We have made a long journey through China. We have seen many Chinese under many circumstances. And everywhere the same impression-marvellous industry. We have travelled by modern steamboat on the river and by modern railroad on land, we have seen Chinese in iron foundries, telegraph offices, banks, even rubbing elbows with the westerner in big hotels, in treaty ports, and riding in automobiles on foreign-made roads, but all this is not the real China, the true Chinese.

Everywhere there are signs of an awakening, but China is a tremendous lump of dough, and though leaven has been sprinkled here and there across ages old inventions, is content with the products of its once splendid creative ability, is satisfied with an ingenuity, patience, and industry which have became immemorial.

We have seen some of China's contridutions to human knowledge and progress. We have seen how the Chinese gives expression to his sense of beauty in iron and bronze, on paper and silk, in wood and porcelain.

Chinese Love Luxury.

Nothing is too significantly utilitarian to serve at the same time to gratify an aesthetic sense. We have seen how he elothes and feeds himself, and we know that he is not stingy. Nothing could be further from the truth than the belief that the Chinese is "tight" with money.
He wants something for his money; he does not gain merit by ostentatious display or reckless throwing away of coin.
But he loves luxries, is even fond of wine, women, and song, and is willing to spend his money to get them. We have seen how he lives and had a point of view regarding his architecture and art.
In all this we see a wonderful man,
quite too content from our rapid-paced point of view. Even a mollycoddle in a way, because he venerates the old, prefers a cannry to a bull pup for a companion. We feel sorry for him because he hasn't rapid transit or the latest method of economically killing pigs, and because he prefers iron in the mine to iron in the soul, and because his one best seller is Confucius.

But after all, what does this Chinese hink about? What kind of a mind has tinis heathen Chinese? It must be different from ours, or ours from his, else the public.

Just here it must be insisted upon that fundamentally the mind of the Chinese is the same as yours or mine. To put it another way, the laws which govern the development of his mind are those which govern the development of the mind of man throughout the world. The difference is in the contents of the mind. The character of the reaction from any given phenomenon varies in accordance with that contents.

omenon varies in accordance with that contents.

Step on an American's toes, and he might strike you in the face; a Chinese might apologize for having been in your way. For ages certain kinds of tradition, habits and customs have got into the mind of each individual Chinese. These traditions, habits, and customs are not necessarily more or less rational than ours, but they make him what he is—different.

We have our traditions, customs, and manners. We venerate the Bible, study Greek and Latin, graduate, and forget it all, and go hustling on our way. The Chinese may have hustled once. There is much evidence that they are being forced round to that point of view again. But meanwhile they live in accordance with a kind of philosophy which declares after the deed that it is fate, and accepts it they live in which declares after the philosophy which declares after the deed that it is fate, and accepts it without protest.

The Oriental mind does differ from the Occidental mind, but after all the difference is not so profound as we think. Between the two there is no unfathomable sulf. Whatever the difference, it is of degree and not of kind. Each group of men has its own values for different things—God, wife, pleasure, children, money, might, space,

Don Miguel is said to have made a strong appeal for action, with the result that the King languidly rose and accompanied him under the condition that they stop to purchase a string of pearls that had been admired by his charmer.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—James Ramsay MacDoneld, Socialist and Labor member of the British House of Commons for Leicester, has sent a letter to the Vorwaerts, in which he asserts that the speech made by Chancellor Lioyd George on July 21, and which is the cause of the present anti-English outburst in the Reichstag and throughout the nation, was delivered after Great Britain had waited two weeks for Germany to reply to the British request for an explanation of

CAN BEEF TRUST ESCAPE?

First Move Made In What Promises Be Big Legal Battle.

[Canadian Press.] , Ill., Nov. 16.—What promise of being one of the bitterest and most important legal battles ever fought out in the federal courts was begun before United States Circuit Judge Christian C. Kohlsaat today. Counsel for the Government and the soin court for argument in the habeas corpus proceedings filed in behalf of nine indicted meat packers and which attacked the constitutionality of the criminal provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Judge Kohlsaat granted the order for the writ. The ground gained by counsel for the packers in the first move was the cause for a hurried gathering of legal talent to protect the federal interests.

The future trial of the indicted men depends on the action taken by Judge Kohlsaat on the writ. Should the court decide to quash the writ, then, by a provision of the rules of the supreme court, he may either remand the ladicted men for trial in the district court or detain them in the custody of the circuit court until the appeal, which it is assumed would be made in such an instance, is threshed out on the question of the law's validity in the supreme court.
