

the principles of good corporate citizenship, particularly with regard to providing the greatest possible Canadian content in their products, reasonable access to export markets, the fullest degree of processing prior to export, and the carrying out of a measure of product development and research in Canada. Such encouragement should, however, stop short of any form of legislative compulsion.