

of the Selkirk Settlements have gone, never to return ; nor can the experiment be now repeated—at least with so long a history—in any quarter of the globe. Modern life is too quick.

A WINDMILL AT THE SETTLEMENTS.