THE TORONTO WORLD THURSDAY MORNING ly repudiated the idea of exclusion be-ing regarded as a party triumph. Temporary Exclusion. In continuing the debate tonight, Carson emphasized the fact that he had already gone a long way in former speeches on the subject of the federal scheme, and had stated that he would not object if, by this scheme. Ulster AT THE HORSE SHOW WAR IN ULSTER TO BE AVOIDED? not object if, by this scheme, Ulster received equal treatment with other subjects of the United Kingdom, "Our Commander Tweedie Wrung Compromise Now Believed to subjects of the United Kingdom. "Our complaint is that at present the gov-ernment do not treat us as other sub-jects of the United Kingdom, but single us out for political and party pur-poses," he said. "If Ulster was to be excluded until such time as a complete federal scheme of which Ireland will form an integral unit was brought about then I am prepared to go over and press that in Ulster. There is no one in the United Kingdom who feels his position and responsibility more acutely than I do. I admit this divi-sion has weakened our power's in the councils of Europe, but how absurd it is to put it down to me! It is the Ul-ster people who resist. to welcome Churchil's suggestion, which certainly pointed a way of peace. He believed that "if it comes to war in Ulster the verdict will be that the responsibility does not rest upon us, but upon those who accuse us of law-lessness and sedition." Sir Edward in his reply to Mr Churchil's invitation declared all he wanted for Ulster was such terms as would conserve the dignity of the Ulster men and their civil and religious freedom. He concluded that in case the home rule bill passed it would be his earnest prayer that the government of the south and west of Ireland would prove so successful that it might be to Ulster's interest to join and form a united Ireland. Premier Asquith concluded the debate with an eloquent speech, which contained the statement that his offer of the temporary exclusion of Ulster Counties from the operation of the home rule bill for a period of six years remained open. He said he considered Sir Edward Carson's statement a most important one, and he recognized and reciprocated its spirit. A settlement, he declared, could not be successfully negotiated by bargaining across the floor of the house of commons, and the questions at issue could not be settled behind the backs of the men of Ulster or of the rest of Ireland. Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the opposition, who spoke before the premier, said the premier must recognize that the calamity facing fast? What right had the government the country was so awful that some way to peace must be found at any cost. He continued: "If the premier does seek for peace down by force it will mean civil war, and nothing less. When the govern-ment introduced this home rule bill they entirely misunderstood the reality of the hostility of Ulster, and, in my opinion, it is the clear duty of the prime minister to recognize now that the calamity with which we are faced is so awful that some way of peace at any cost must be found. We on this side of the house will do everything in our power to make a peaceful solu-tion possible." Dealing with the question of the re-cent orders against Ulster, Law said the story of the government was really cent orders against Ulster, Law said the story of the government was really incredible. Churchill said these move-fusal of the offer of the government. What has that to do with defending stores? Why has Asquith refused to give to the house of the country the verbal instruction given to General Paget? Why were officers of ships or-dered to go ashore, both at Dublin and Belfast, in plain clothes, altho it was against the King's regulations? What about the appointment of General Macready as military governor of Bel-fast? What right had the government minister, was called into the confer-ence. Balfour's Solemn Warning,

Arthur J. Balfour, former Unionist premier, in a moving peroration to his speech, justified Ulster in making civil war. He said his public life had been devoted to the cause of the union be tween Great Britain and Ireland, and concluded:

"If, in order to avoid the incalculable horrors of civil war, we must set up a separate parliament in Dublin, I shall think it marks the failure of my whole life's work."

Thrust at Churchill.

A brisk passage between Balfour and there was one character whom criminals thought meaner in morals than themselves, namely, the agent provocateur.

Mr. Churchill: "I hope the right hon. gentleman will prove his insinuation." Mr. Balfour: "We have only to look at the right hon. gentleman's speeches." Proceeding, Mr. Balfour said the Ministerialists seemed to be of opinion that under no circumstances was it justifiable for the population to resist the government. Such circumstances certainly should only happen once in two or three centuries, unless the whole fabric of society was to be shattered. but the opposition never questioned such a set of circumstances as now faced Ulster. Exclusion Only Remedy.

Mr. Balfour confessed himself puzzled by Churchill's overnight speech. It seemed to be an experimental sug-its energy in the waving of Mexican gestion, which received neither the flags, shooting off pistols, breaking a approval nor condemnation of few Mexico.' Churchill's colleagues. Under those
