Shaw; and to complete this list of irreparable losses, a young man, Mr. James S. Evans, who, after having gone to foreign parts in search of health, came home to fall a victim to the unmerciful disease, consumption.

— There has been some lively skirmishing between rival assignees over the estate of Henry Brownrigg, a grocer of St. Gabriel, a suburb of this city. The meeting, at which the decisive battle was to be fought out, developed some striking peculiarities—or, as is alleged, what could be very modestly called striking irregularities,—a claim which was fyled for voting purposes evidently, being found to consist of three notes, two of which had been paid some time before Mr. Brownrigg's insolvency, while the third had been retired by a renewal in full, which renewal had also been fyled by the holder. How these notes came to be outside of Mr. Brownrigg's possession, and in the hands of the party making the claim, is an interesting problem only to be solved by future developments. The party swearing to the claim states through the daily press that he bought them in good faith from a wholesale grocer, who is also a creditor of the estate, and, so far, no further explanation has been vouchsafed, but it is not probable the matter will be allowed to rest here, as the cause of business morality demands that a thorough sifting of this disgraceful affair should be made, and the guilty parties punished.

The present trouble is only the natural outcome of the much to be deprecated canvassing for estates, carried on by a certain proportion of our assignees, accountants, et hoc genus omne, and which, as in the present case, is often carried to extremes. At the meeting Mr. C. O. Perrault was confirmed in possession of the estate. The liabilities amount to $22,674, of which $16,576 are hypothecary claims.

— It is quite seldom that the editor of a paper feels any sympathy for the subscriber who desires his paper to be stopped. If, in such a case, any feeling is manifested, it does not indicate that a very high opinion of the appreciative power of the forsaking subscriber is entertained by the editor; but in the present circumstances, our sympathies are deeply moved. Were we not restrained by motives of delicacy, we would publish his letter entire, although what it relates is an every-day occurrence. He says: "I regret to have to stop your paper as it has given me more knowledge of business; but about three years ago I committed the folly of giving accommodation paper, and unless I can make some arrangements to go on, I will have to give up." The few lines above contain the history of many business men, and volumes on the subject could not point out more graphically the end of any man weak enough to sign accommodation paper. Our friend commenced business some four years ago, full of hope. Attentive to his affairs, he was successful, and as a matter of course had many friends. Some of them took advantage of his generous disposition. They wanted his name on a note, there was not the least danger, they would meet it at maturity, and they did meet it; the first one is usually met. How could he refuse afterwards? Other notes were endorsed; they were not met, but were renewed, and the promises of meeting them renewed also. These accommodation notes preyed on his mind, he was no longer so clear-sighted in his regular business; perhaps he neglected it, perhaps he took to drink, success forsook him, his credit went, his friends were gone long before, and, instead of the prosperity he might have attained, he had to go under and face bankruptcy. The name of our friend is "Legion."
