

severe in those States, where they have few or no Protestant ministers.—The people of the States are divided into parties about religion, and are not at unity among themselves—Union, order, harmony, and prosperity, universally extend among the Catholics, in Canada.

It is well known, that the principles of liberty and law, which give dignity and happiness to the States, are derived from the maxims adopted in the government of England. These principles must extend through the provinces. Legislatures elected by the people, and trials by jury, put new powers into the hands of the Canadians.—Civil courts are regularly and frequently holden,—no taxes are levied, and no extortions made.

Madness, avarice, bigotry, and intolerance alone, could wish to carry war into Canada. Commerce and colonization, under the banners of peace, will give happiness, wealth, and prosperity, to every part of North-America.
