The Hamilton Times has a specimen of an afflicted person of this type. The World has on several occasions called the attention of The Times to manifest errors | in its statements regarding the hydroelectric power commission. One can make great allowances for a difference in point of view, for party bias, or in the statement of matters of opinion or policy. But reasonable respect for truth in fact seems necessary if society is to get along at all. After many months' observation, The World was compelled to state that the Cataract power organs in Hamilton seemed unable to give a fair account of anything con-
