TMP TYMENT IN PIANOFORTES.

THE original inventor and improver of upright Piknoforter, by which a totally new mechanism was substituted, '4' for the clumsy hinge of leather and vellum, formerly employed for the hammers and leavers," was Mr. R. WORNUM, of LONDON, the sole inventor and patenter of the justly celebrated PICOLO PIANOFORTE.
His object in pursuing, for eighteen years, the perfection of his original ideas on the subject, was, to construct an upright Pianoforte, of the smalleast possible dimensiones, so as to obviate all the objections relative to size, and the destruction of the voice in singing, which professional singers invariably urge against large upright instrumonts; at the same time, to preserve a rich fullnass, sweetness and body of lone, to improve the action, to facilitate the louch, and to ensure a greater referition of from than upright instruments usually possess. All those desiderata Mr. Wornum completely effected, in constructing what has now for a number of years been known as the PICCOLO PIANOFORTE. The size of the instrument especially adapts it for the houses of this country; the rich (fulners and awareness of ite
