PICKING AND KEEPING APPLES.

Winter apples should be picked during the first part of October, before the high winds come on. The greatest care should be exercised in handling them, or the fruit will soon decay. It is better to pack in barrels or place them in some cool location; cooler the better if they do not freeze. When very cold weather comes, they will of course need to be put into a cool cellar. All fruit keeps better in a very cool, dry place. If the cellar is warm, keep the windows open during the day. In picking apples, begin with those varieties most likely to be blown off, such as Hubbardston, Nonsuch, Baldwin, R. I. Greening, and others that are riper than the Russets, should be picked last. It is well to make three sorts; the best to be carefully packed, to be sold or kept; the second best for immediate use, while the poorest may be made into vinegar. If the vinegar is intended for family use, care should be exercised in sorting the fruit so that no decayed ones shall go into the heap. Apples keep better if not left on the tree too long. No fruit should be over-ripe to keep well. The barrels or vessels of any kind that are used in which to keep the fruit should be clean and free from all unpleasant smell. Good clean flour-barrels are perhaps the best thing that can be obtained at moderate cost. We have known good apples very much injured by improper treatment, and we therefore strongly advise our friends to be careful. Our old maxim, that "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well," will apply in this case.

WE HAVE A LARGE LOT OF POCKET BOOKS.
