Cedar Hill Directors Meet—
Extension on Manawagonish Road Told Of.

At a meeting of the directors of the Cedar Hill Cemetery Co. last night the pleasing announcement was made that the last payment had been made on the Manawagonish road property which had been purchased as an extension of the burial place.

Historic Sketch.
The Legislature of New Brunswick passed a law in 1807 requiring that no more burials should take place in Cedar Hill cemetery, Lancaster Heights. That portion of the cemetery which adjoins the old Church of England burying ground was owned by John and P. L. Connor, and from them burial lots were purchased. The lot holders had the right to bury but no legal authority to own.

In 1912 agitation was begun for incorporation and in 1913 incorporation took place. The men instrumental in procuring this were J. H. Allingham, John Trearlin, O. D. Hanson and Holter Stackhouse. The land was purchased from M. Connor for $2,400. To meet this payment and for purpose of making the matter self-sustaining lots were sold, but this was found to be inadequate, and some other scheme had to be devised.

Various Plans.
The first was to enlarge the boundaries of the cemetery and a contract was entered into with the Lauriston Co., but owing to the intervention of the Board of Health on grounds that it was not sanitary owing to drainage which could not be perfected for safety to residents on the outskirts of the cemetery, this scheme was abandoned.

Buy in New Place.
The next move was to purchase in 1924 a portion of land on Manawagonish road from Harold Chadwick for the sum of $9,000. Finances were low, and money had to be borrowed from the bank, payments to be made in yearly instalments. The last of these payments, $200, was paid by the treasurer, W. Geo. Gray, at a meeting of the directors held last night. The revenue produced from the sale of lots on the extension in Manawagonish road will produce principal and interest which will pay the salary of a caretaker the year round. To overcome the difficulties of burial in Manawagonish road during the winter season a vault, costing about $20,000, has been placed in Cedar Hill, where corpses are placed until the conditions are suitable for removing them to the new cemetery. A water system on the old grounds, costing $1,000, has been established. These important improvements have been done under the present board of directors.

The old Church of England burying ground, where burials still take place, contains many ancient graves. A committee is about to be appointed to work in conjunction with Cedar Hill cemetery directors and have improvements made.

The New Cemetery.
The new Cedar Hill cemetery extension is situated on Manawagonish road, about one and one-half miles from Fairville and is parallel with Greggwood cemetery in Sand Cove road. It comprises nine acres of land, containing 1,800 burial lots, 85 of which are sold. Other lots are reported selling rapidly. A good general view may be obtained from the centre of the cemetery, the boundary lines on either side marked by young rowan trees.

From the slightly elevated ridge which runs almost through the centre of the lot one of the most beautiful sights of New Brunswick may be obtained. It is gently undulating to the roadside, while on the other side of the road is a carpet of green tableland. Looking south the eye rests on a beautiful stretch of meadow land, and beyond are the hills of the Bay of Fundy, with Mahogany Island opposite.

To the southeast a splendid view of Partridge Island is obtained. A little to the southwest a beautiful piece of woodland and towering spruce trees affords the mainland, while a rocky wooded peninsula juts out into the sea. This bit of scenery is known as Graylor's Island. A little to the southwest is the pretty little village of Lorneville, dotted with white cottages surrounded by green fields.

Looking in a northerly direction the eye rests upon green valley hills clad with spruce, fir, maple, and poplars with all their varying shades of foliage. An opening between the trees reveals a beautiful stretch of water where the St. John river joins the Nepesic. Another opening discloses Kennecasis Island on the opposite side of the river. Looming in the distance are several blue peaked mountain ridges or hills which on a clear day are very prominent, especially Old Bald Mountain which seems to stand on guard keeping watches over the lower reaches of the river.

Not Yet Named.
The directors have chosen this ideal spot for a cemetery. As yet it is unnamed. One person has suggested the name of Ridgmont, and other suggestions would be gladly received.

The present directors are: J. H. Allingham, president; W. George Gray, treasurer; George Hartshorn, secretary; W. A. Linton, James Williamson, George Clark, Thomas Rippey.

The Little Business Getters Take Over a New Mission

If the members of a prominent St. John family had been skeptical of the value of the classified page ads in the Times-Star, they have probably been converted to full belief through an experience over the weekend. One of these little four liners went out of the beaten path in the issue of Saturday and Monday and proved itself the missionary.

It was intended to secure occupants for furnished rooms. The telephone exchange designation was not given by the advertiser in making the announcement. "West" should have been specified but the advertiser did not do this. In logical sequence came a succession of telephone calls at the home phone of this prominent business man, which carries the same number but on the main exchange.

It was not without its humorous aspect at the outset, for this gentleman, of course, has no rooms to let. But when call followed call and every one asked about those rooms the situation changed and the household not unreasonably rebelled. But what could be done? Nothing.

So through Sunday and Monday the pestering requests for information about rooms kept coming as the telephone jingle imposed on one or other of the household the duty of answering. The ring could not be ignored, for it might be some one with whom it was desired to talk. Finally, in desperation the Times-Star was called up about it and the difficulty was straightened out.

Meanwhile the incident very aptly substantiates the claim of this newspaper that the Times-Star's little ads are great business getters.

Commissioner Frink Tells of Plans for Restoration to First Use.

Commissioner Frink announced this morning that he had decided to proceed with the beautifying of Queen Square, West St. John, next year and it would no longer be available as a ball park. He said the playgrounds would be ready for use next summer and it was felt the Square should be restored to the use for which it was intended, a place to rest and in which to enjoy the air.

He had been in consultation with H. E. Gould and plans for bringing out flower beds and grass plots were discussed. The first move, he said, would be to have the playground up and then the space reserved for grass would be seeded down.

King Square Trees.
The commissioner said he had asked Mr. Gould to have the Balm of Gilead trees in King Square tested and if they were found to be gone in the heart to have them cut down as, while he hated to see the trees, the safety of the public was the first consideration.

Work on the blasting away of a portion of the rock in the centre of Queen Square was to begin at once, the commissioner said, and this would give the residents of that street a better chance to get to their properties.

Commander of Falkenstein Died at Sea—Ship Will Load Potatoes Here.

The German steamer Falkenstein arrived in port last evening with Mr. Seeger, the supercargo, and marine superintendent of the vessel's owners, in charge and the mate acting as captain. This state of affairs was brought about by the death of the captain which occurred last week after the vessel had left Halifax for this port. It was stated that the steamer returned to Halifax and left the captain's body there.

The Falkenstein anchored in the stream here. So far as could be learned the Falkenstein left Halifax for this port toward the end of last week. The captain, who was not well when the vessel left port, died a short time later and it was decided to return to Halifax.

The Falkenstein picked up the steamer Blarimore 11 miles off the Nova Scotia coast and towed the vessel in to Halifax. The captain's body was also left there and the steamer cleared again for this port with the mate in command, in order to fill her charter to load potatoes at this port for London. It is understood that a new captain will be appointed prior to the steamer's departure. The vessel will arrive today at the wharf of the company is a small steamer of 465 tons net register.
