A Statement on

SWEET NUT MARGARINE

As many thousands of satisfied users in St. John are aware, Sweet-Nut Margarine has hitherto been sold yellow in color. Its success has been astounding, and during the two months for which it has been on sale throughout the dominion, the price of cow's butter has dropped several cents per pound.

We have now received directions from Ottawa that it is no longer permissible to sell Sweet-Nut yellow in color, and that in future the housewife must buy it white, and, if she wishes to have it on her table the same color as butter, she must color it herself in the same way as the creameries color most of the butter they make.

In future, therefore, Sweet-Nut will be sold white in color (just the same color as the inside of the coconut from which it is made); in all other respects its preparation remains absolutely unchanged.

Vegetable butter color, the same as is used by the creameries for coloring most of their butter, is on sale at Drug stores in the city. A five cent bottle will color several pounds of butter of margarine. The process takes but a minute.

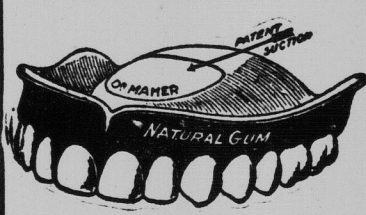

The pure, sweet butter flavor of Sweet-Nut remains unchanged.

It is, and always will be, the only logical successor to creamery butter. The reason—very simple—it's freshly churned from nuts and milk and contains no animal fat and no preservatives.
