Lady Somerset's Sister Woman of Wealth and Philanthropic Tastes—Daughter of Eccentric Nobleman to Wed at 33—Lord Kitchener's Rule in Egypt

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company.)

Adeline, Duchess of Bedford, who has been spending a few days in New York, at the Holland House, with her adopted daughter, Lady Dudley, on her way home from Australia, where Lord Dudley has been filling the office of governor-general of the commonwealth, is the only sister of Lady Henry Somerset, so well known in America, in connection with the role which she has played in the temperance and woman's emancipation movements. Like Lady Henry, she is a daughter of the late Earl Somerset, and noted for her beauty, married in 1876, the tenth Duke of Bedford. Exceedingly stout in his later years, he was a victim to heart disease and succumbed to rumors of suicide, for which there was no foundation, however. He was succeeded by his younger brother, Herbrand, the present duke, who is a man of abundant wealth with this world's goods, since she has not only the property which he left her, but also that inherited from her father, Lord Somerset.

Much of the duchess's income she devotes to philanthropy, and has done so much good work among the female inmates of prisons, and in providing for their welfare after their liberation, that the government felt impelled to show its recognition, by creating for her the office of lady visitor to the female convict establishments of the United Kingdom. Mrs. Maybrick owed much to Adeline, Duchess of Bedford, and it was largely owing to the latter's advocacy of her cause, that the unfortunate woman was eventually set free, instead of being compelled to spend the remainder of her days behind prison walls, as the convicted murderer of her husband.

Catherine Cowell-Stepney, whose impending marriage to Sir Stafford Howard, of Thornbury Castle, Gloucestershire, has just been announced, is the thirty-three year old daughter and sole heiress of the late Sir Arthur Cowell-Stepney, who died about this time two years ago, was found dead in a village railroad station in Arizona, she inherited from her father all his property including about 10,000 acres of land in Wales, and some 15,000 acres of land in California. Sir Arthur was an eccentric. Indeed, it was on the strength of affidavits of the late Mr. Gladstone, of Lord Currie, of Sir Robert Meade, Under secretary of state for the colonial department, and of Sir Percy Sanderson, of the foreign office, with which Sir Arthur had been connected for a number of years, regarding his delinquent conduct, that a charge was made in 1891, grant of the custody of his daughter, then a minor, to her mother. Afterwards, Sir Arthur was under the treatment of the late Sir William Gull, of Dr. Bordenley, and other eminent physicians and specialists for mental ailments, besides being in the custody of an alienist for more than a year. Subsequently, he was sent to the asylum, and gave vent to his anger for the persecution to which he considered himself to have been subjected, by writing his English citizenship, and securing letters of naturalization as a citizen of the United States.

Sir Arthur was very proud of his American citizenship, and in writing to his fellow members of the "The Travel and Brooks, two of the most important clubs in London, to which he belonged up to the time of his death, he begged that they should address him as "Mr. Arthur Stepney," since on becoming an American citizen he had "dropped the harness for good and all." While over here he was reported to have obtained a decree of divorce in the State of Idaho, on the objection of his daughter. But this divorce was never recognized by the English tribunals and was declared by Sir Eddon Gore, but I am so positive my remedy will completely relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that I offer to furnish it free of all cost if it fails.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"WHAT would you do if you were going with a young man and were in love with him and he wasn't anxious to show his love for you? This young man is very nice, always treats me very courteously and tells the young men in town that he loves me. But I had my girl friend go with him to a show recently and she asked him if he ever intended to get married. He told her 'yes,' some day when he got so old that he would have to feed himself with a spoon."

I quote the above letter because it describes a certain kind of ad which, I think, decidedly needs to be put into the millinery of public scorn. And that is the man who never wants to admit to one girl that he is in love with another.

This creature with a disagreeable kind of cunning, evidently realizes what is, to a certain extent, true—that the knowledge that he is in love with one woman will make him less interesting to the other members of the opposite sex. And so, whenever he goes among other women, he either keeps still about his love or openly belittles it as this one does.

Another he cynically sings the praises of bachelorhood. To one girl he insists that there is really nothing between him and the lady in the case.

Another he flatters by comparing her favorably in some particular with the girl he is supposed to regard as the pink of perfection.

Sometimes he is cool to the girl he has won, his more often he is the most ardent and admiring lover and she sometimes wonders, when she tells her girl friends how devoted he is, why they don't seem more impressed.

"What would I do if I had a man like that?"—to return to the lady's question.

I don't know. I hope I should be strong enough to give him up and wait for a man more worth loving.

Some things like that are easier to say "I would" about, than to do. Maybe I'd just keep on loving him and perhaps love and idealize him into decency.

I'm hoping that that's what you will succeed in doing, little girl. Of course, it's much harder to do that with petty little meanness than real big sin.

"Harder" doesn't mean impossible. It couldn't be that. For love knows no such word.

to trace their descent from the royal house of Tudor, sits in the tomb in the Lincoln parish church of Sir Thomas Stepney, grandson of Vandylke, "descended from Henry VII."

Sir Stafford Howard is the elder brother of Esme Howard, formerly connected with the Howard family, and now English envoy at Bern. He sat for a number of years in parliament, and was Under Secretary of State for India in the Gladstone Administration of 1888.

For the last eighteen years he has been Commissioner of the Royal Woods, Forests and Land Revenue Department; that is to say, of the department which is entrusted with the administration of all that vast Crown property which Queen Victoria, King Edward and King George have each on their accession conceded for their lifetime to the national treasury, in return for a Civil List which in this manner costs the British taxpayer nothing.

The Howards of Greynoke are a branch of the great ducal house of Howard, of which the Duke of Norfolk, premier peer of the realm, is the chief.

Despite all statements to the contrary, official and otherwise, Lord Kitchener is going out to Egypt, in a much more important role than that of the late Sir Eddon Gore. For he is to have not only a large military staff from the War Department, this certainly does not look as if he were to be restricted at Cairo to the duties performed by Sir Eddon Gore, but serves to confirm the assertion made in several of these letters during the last twelve months, that when Lord Kitchener did go to Egypt, and took hold of things there, it would be with changes of a dramatic character in view, involving all probability the deposition of the Khedive, and the proclamation of Egypt, and of the Sudan as entirely British, instead of Ottoman possessions.
