MRS. SOLOMON SAYS:

By HELEN ROWLAND

(Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Being the Confessions of the Seventh-Hundredth Wife.

My daughter, wireless telegraphy is strange and the contents of a bowl of chop-suey mysterious; but which if these are more unfathomable than the workings of a man's mind?

Now, in Babylon, there dwelt a prince who was enamored of a certain damsel.

And all the other damsels of the city were filled with jealousy.

For, they said, "She is a mix! And why shall she pluck the largest plum in the garden of Love, when we have not so much as a bruise amongst us, to call 'My Dear'?"

And behold, the damsel sought out the Prince; and the first damsel counseled him, saying:

"Oh, Prince, the woman whom thou lovest is unworthy of thee! For she is known in the Land for the number of her suitors; and she hath already acquired a 'past'!"

But the youth frowned upon her and bade her depart, saying: "Then shall I wed her, and save her from the wolves among men and the gossip among women, and her 'past' shall be forgotten."

And the second damsel besought him, saying: "Oh, Prince, wed not this damsel, in thy folly! For she is fickle as the summer wind and as an ice-melon, cold at heart; and from her trifling, many men have suffered."

But the fifth damsel was wise in her generation, and she spake only words of praise, saying, "How fortunate art thou, oh Prince, to secure such a jewel for thyself! For, she is so original! And, because she anointeth herself with loud scent, and weareth a scarlet hat, and smilith openly upon the garden's son, why should she be held up to mockery? For these may be follies and indiscretions, but they are not sins."

Then did the youth bow his head in his hands and groan aloud. For at first, was he conquered.

And the damsel whom he had loved wondered why he came no more.

For she was as one dead to him. Verily, verily, sooner will a man forgive a woman for breaking all the commandments, than for breaking one of the conventions. Sooner will he overlook all her sins, than one indiscretion.

For, this is the First Commandment of Love: Thou shalt not make thyself ridiculous!

Seah.

MRS. A. B. BRODERICK

INSTANTLY KILLED

Resident of Ottawa Struck by Train at Santa Barbara, California.

The Ottawa Citizen publishes additional particulars of the death of Mrs. A. B. Broderick, of Ottawa.

Santa Barbara, Cal., March 17.—Mrs. Julia Broderick, wife of Arthur B. Broderick, retired banker, of Ottawa, Ont., was instantly killed at Miramar, a suburb, late yesterday when she stepped from behind a hedge directly in front of a Southern Pacific passenger train. The body was so badly mangled that the husband did not recognize it, and it was not until several hours later that her identity was established through her wedding ring.

Friends in Ottawa of the late Mrs. Broderick have received telegraphic messages of her death, which are greatly regretted here. Mr. and Mrs. Broderick were former residents of Ottawa for many years, during which time Mr. Broderick was the manager of Molson's Bank. In the past few years they have spent much time away from Ottawa on the Pacific coast and in the Southern States. They were in Ottawa for several weeks last year residing at the Roxborough Apartments. All preparations had been made for their return to Ottawa in June of this year, when they would take up residence here again, their furniture and other belongings being here now.

A daughter, Mrs. Stuart Cameron, resides in Vancouver. Mr. Barton MacDougall, of Edmonton, is a son of her first marriage. To Mr. Frederick MacDougall, who died some years ago. (Many of the older residents of this city retain pleasant recollections of that late Mrs. Broderick who was a daughter of the late John D. and Margaret Travis, and a niece of the late George W. Gerow. Mrs. John F. T. Mon King street east, is a niece of Mrs. Broderick.)

Some of the smart new yellow knitted silk jumpers have wide sailor collars of snow-white coarse linen, fringed with white silk sailor's knots are worn with them, and they go with short accordion-pleated skirts in the same color.

Add a pinch of salt to coffee just before serving to clear it nicely.

Girl From Nowhere
Good Attraction

Large Audience Pleased at Imperial—Pretty Costumes, Fine Singing and Dancing.

"The Girl from Nowhere," who from being a lonely little girl, becomes a very happy one, was the attraction which drew a large audience to the Imperial Theatre last evening. Announced as "a new and sensational comedy," the production, which is written by F. Stuart Whyte and produced by Zara Clinton, proved to be made up of a chorus gorgeously costumed that could both sing and dance and were graceful to a degree, several clever retailers of jokes, including the favorite J. V. Barrett-Lennard, and Miss Zara Clinton, who is "The Girl from Nowhere." Miss Clinton's talent as a singer and actress had even more scope than in previous vehicles and she was never more attractive than as "Molly Jones." Her costume was very beautiful and she danced and sang with a sweetness that is peculiarly her own.

R. B. Barrett-Lennard had several good songs.

A hearty welcome was given J. V. Barrett-Lennard, who was as funny as ever, and others who have made friends in St. John. Mr. Billy Orwalk was also very amusing, particularly in his Spanish serenade.

Miss Clinton's song "As Ye Sow," is probably the best musical number. Others, which were encored were—"Widows are Wonderful," "I'll Build a World in the Heart of a Rose," "Rebecca," "Santa Barbara" and the trio "We Don't Want a Girl," which contained local hits.

Mr. Warren-Lawler in the part of the Mexican heavyweight was splendid.

The costumes are most elaborate especially those in the Bathing Models song. Effects in Colorland were most artistic, in fact, every detail in stage setting merits that description.

"The Girl from Nowhere" will give pleasure to all who love brightness, gaiety, fun, beauty and music.
