Try Again. Never stopped by stone or pebble, See how gayly speeds the atream! Winding on through tangled rushes, Never stayed by rain or gleam. Hark! how gayly sings the streamlet ever sings its glad refrain; Sings in eddying and in leaping, "Try, try, try again !"

See the gullant river flowing, Ever without thought of rest, Over rocks, 'neath from bridges, Round the islets on its breast. Hark ! the river as it floweth, Ever sings its glad refrain, As it rolls by town and city-"Try, try, try again !"

See the glorious ocean bounding-Proud, triumphant winner free Leaping over barries conquered, Telling, resiless, victor sea! Hark! the glorious ocean chanting, Ever sings its glad refrain, Joining with the stream and river, "Try try, try again !"

Courage ! onward ! patient working Makes us masters over all; Lea! by leaf the flower unfoldeth; Stone by stone we build the wall. Hark! from those who've toiled and

Break the glad triumphant strain; They have reached the mountain sum-

The Country Lassie. She blossomed in the country, Where sunny summer flings Her rowy arms around the earth, And brightest blessings brings; Health was her sole inherisance, And grave her only dower; I never dreamed the wild wood Contained so sweet a flower.

And inland from the sea, My lassie bloomed in goodness, As pure as pure could be: She caught her dewy freshness From hill and mountain bower, I never dreamed the wildwood Contained so sweet a flower.

Far distant from the city,

The rainbow must have lent her some of its airy grace; The wild rose parted with a blush, That nestled on her face; The sunbeams got entangled in The long waves of her hair, Or she had never grown to be

So modest and so fair. The early birds have taught her Their joyous matin song, And some of their soft innocence, She's been with them so long. And for her now, if need be, I'd part with wealth and power; I never dreamed the wild wood Contained so sweet a flower.

HOW THE EARTH YIELDS RICHES.

An official statement of the mineral wealth of Great Britain has just appeared in London, and 'rom it we gather the following in-teresting statistics of what the earth yields for the enrichment of the British people. There are over 3,088 collieries in operation, employing over a quarter of a million of persons-including seven thousand women. The I ruest quantity of coal produced in one year was 83,635,214 tons. This was in 1861. The average export of soal from England is about 7,000,000 tons a year. Of iron seves and a half millions of tons were surelied last year, but 36,270 tons besides were imported The value of the pig it on produced last year was nearly £10,000 000, or $50,000,000. There are 230 copper mines in the kingdom, of which 201 are in Cornwall and Devonshire, and they produced in the year 1862 over 224,000 tons of ore-but this gave only 14,844 tons of copper after refining. The tin mines yielded more in 1862 than in previous years, the aggregate product, having been 14,127 tons but there is a prospect that the Coruish mines will yield still more largely this year. dred thousand tons a year and the silver extracted from the lead ore in one year (1852) amounted to 686, 123 ounces. Small quantities of gold have been found from time to time; one mine last year produced five thousand ounces, worth about $100,000.

Earthy minerals—barytes, lime, salt, and the valuable clays—produce annually about the property of Thomas Warnock, eight and a half millions of dollars; and the Township of Westmeath being part of lot annual value of all the mineral products is No. 2 in the 8th concession, on the main about $225,000,000. The great coal yield, road from Ottawa to Pembroke, 2 miles from however, is the most striking item in these figures. Were duty on coal removed, John house, stabling for 42 span of horses and ex-

The Boats of Savages.

Most of these examples of savage skill are constructed, it must be remembered, without saw, plane, chisel, or any iron tool what-ever, but are sewed and clamped together with thongs, which, however, soon rot in the water, and have to be renewed every year. The royal yacht of the king of the Islands-one Tanona-is thus described by Commander Wilkes :- "It had a magnificent appearance with its immense sail of white mats, and the pennants streaming from its yard at once denoted it as belonging to some great chief. It was a fit accompaniment to the magnificent accompaniment to the magnificent according and advanced along rapidly and gracefully. It was a single cance, one hundred feet in length, with an outrigger of large size, (making it look like a double cance,) ornamented with a great number of the Cypresa ovula shells. Its velocity was almost inconceivable; and I was told that Tanca often amuses himself when sailing he amuses. ceivable; and I was told that Tanoa often amuses himself, when sailing, by running down cances, leaving those who belong to them to recover themselves and their projecty as best they may." Capsizing is not much thought of, I suppose, by the Tongese, the water of the Pacific being at least tepid in those parts; but strange to say, the in those parts; but strange to says the Greenlanders think very little of either. When the kejah of a Greenlander is turned over, he swings his body by aid of the oar, and by a peculiar muscular effort, to which he is trained from his youth, so as to right himself and his craft at once, although the boat be for the moment on the top of him. boat be for the moment on the top of him.

Most of us have been accustomed to consider the o k as the tree must suitable in every respect for ship-building; but the coos tree, out of which the Gelves, or vessels of the Red Sea, are constructed, must be acknowledged, in this respect, very literally to bear the palm. Out of this tree a vessel may be build, rigged, and fitted with mast, sails, cordage, and ropes, and vistualled with bread, water, wine, augar, vinegar, and oil.
