HONORED SIR:

It is not without a feeling of regret that we contemplate the separation of teachers and taught; yet, in departing for our respective spheres of labor, we go cheered by the thought that the endearing relation in which we have stood as teachers and pupils is to be dissolved only to make way for another and still more important-the relation of co-workers with you. sir, in the high and holy cause which you have espoused; and we take encouragment from the ness that the judicious counsel by which we have already profitted so largely, will not be withheld in the time of need.

Permit us through you, sir, to offer to your colleagues our esteemed teachers in the English, Mathematical, and Musical departments, our sincere thanks for the anxious solicitude with which they urged us onward in our studies, for the ability and energy displayed in the lucid expositions of the subjects brought before us, and for the miform kindness with which they have rendered us every requisite assistance.

Of vour disinterested kindness, you anxious regard for our personal comforts, your fervent supplications to the Giver of all good, in our behalf, as well as the affectionate regards of our other teachers, we shall ever cherish a grateful remembrance; and although we may labor in mheres remote from this Seminary, yet endearing associations will ever cluster around the thoughts of this our Alma Mater.

That the blessing of heaven may crown your labors with success, that you may be spared to see the great work in which you are engaged placed upon a firm basis, and bring forth its legitimate results in this the land of your adoption : that you and your coadjutors may enjoy happiness and prosperity in all your social and lomestic relations, and eventually be crowned with the reward of the righteous and faithful servant, is the sincere and enrnest prayer of Mr. Young suggested that the discussion had better be postponed until after all the members of the new government had arrived.

Mr. Howe thought it would be but fair to all parties to name a day for taking up the question. He then asked the hon. leader of the government if he was prepared to bring down the papers connected with the Mines and Minerals.

Hon. ATTORNEY GENERAL stated that as soon as the absent member of the government arrived there would be a meeting of the Cabinet, when arrangements would be made for immediately prosecuting the business of the house with vigor; and he had no doubt that the papers enquired for would be brought down forthwith.

It was resolved that the question of the ballot be the order of the day for Saturday.

The committee, therefore, recommended that that the privileges sought should be granted for the term of twentyfive years instead of fifty, as prayed for in the London Company. While waiting they adjourned to an Hotel, and while in conversation together, they were joined by Mr. The day was for the most part occupied with Davidson, also formely a resident of Halitax. Of course there were many old reminiscences to be discussed. Meanwhile time flew apace and Mr. Tempest's friend fearful they would lose their passages, urged the former to basten to the depot. But Mr. Davidson anxious probably to prolong the interview, took out his watch and assured them they had still half an hour to spare. Soon after Mr. T. left Mr. D. and hurried to secure his passage, when he found to his mortification that the train had left a few minutes previous. Being anxious to return bome, he took a private conveyance for Hamilton, and his consternation may be better imagined than described, when on reaching the Desjardins Canal bridge, he saw the wreck and ruin and slaughter that a short time had effected and from which he had been so Providentially preserved. PERSONS long afflicted who have valinty tried many expedients to eradicate a disease, are but too apt to give way to despondency, and relinquish all hope of cure. Even when a remedy that has cured thousands is placed. Even when a remedy that has cure! thousands is placed within their reach, they exclaim, Oh' it is of mouse, nothing will care me. This is worse than forly, it is a wilful sacrifice of health, the greatest of temporal blessings, such morbid feelings peculiarly obtain among sufficers from Scrofula, Cutaneous and eruptive diseases, arising chiefly from the disfiguring and often repulsive features of these maladies.
