

harness-makers; Graham McKay, Andrew McDonald and Geo. Creighton, blacksmiths; McLellan & Son, jewellers; Thos. Fillmore, baker and confectioner. There are two hotels: the Albion, conducted by Mr. Wm. Cherry, and the Commercial, managed by Mr. Hugh McInnes. Physicians, Dr. Green, Dr. Adams, Dr. Sutherland.

Has Embro a great future before her in her newly-awakened life? Undoubtedly. She has now every favorable facility for growth and expansion: a splendid location, and an enterprising and ambitious population, a flourishing rural environment, and excellent railway facilities. But while pressing on in the pursuit of growth and prosperity, let the aspiring little town, and the townships of which she is the hub, not forget the pure and lofty traditions of brotherly love and manly character handed down to us by our grand old pioneer forefathers.
