"They don't sell ice on as good terms here as they do in Germany," remarked John Dittmar, the expert white-wings, as he deftly lifted another shovel-full of refuse into his cart. "I ordered ice here the other day and I expected the ice-man to bring me an ice box. He didn't. In Germany when you buy ice, you sign a contract to take ice for two years. An ice box is given with the first piece. At the end of the two years the ice box is yours."

Chatham Township Farmer Meets With a Serious Accident in the South.

Crawfordville, Ind., July 19.—John Chinnick, a wealthy horseman, of Chatham, Ont., was struck by a Vandalia train last night and is thought to be dying as a result of his injuries. He has not yet regained consciousness.—Detroit Free Press.

James Chinnick, of Chatham township, is a brother of the unfortunate man. Mr. John Chinnick went to Indiana a couple of weeks ago with some horses. Last evening James Chinnick received a telegram to the effect that his brother John had met with a serious accident and advised him to come at once. He and the injured man's wife left this morning for Indiana. The worst is feared and it is thought that the injured man was seriously hurt.

GAVE THEM SEND-OFF

One of the Maple City's most popular young men—a budding young doctor—was made the subject of a practical joke at the Grand Trunk depot last evening. The joke was enjoyed by everyone except Doc, including all of the travellers and railroad employees who happened to be in the vicinity at the time.

A young lady who has been visiting in the city for the past week, was returning to her home in a neighboring city—not St. Thomas, for this young lady was pretty, accomplished, bright and attractive—and was at the depot to bid her farewell.

During her stay in the city she has made many friends, but none more devout or attentive than the young physician in question and a clever young book-keeper, between whom it was a close race for supremacy in the young lady's favor.

When the train pulled in and the young lady had made her farewells to her many friends, each of whom were prepared before-hand for what was to follow, the Doc, eager to strive to the last to prove his supremacy over the other young man, strode up the steps of the coach with the young lady's grip, followed immediately by the young lady herself.

This was the cue for the rest of the party and the young couple were showered with rice, old shoes and wishes for future happiness. They were followed into the coach still being showered with rice. The travellers looked at each other with knowing smiles, looking forward with amusement to a ride with the bride and groom.

They were surprised, however, to see the supposed groom retire awkwardly from the coach, his face covered with blushes of embarrassment, while the supposed bride continued her journey all alone.

Doc says it was a good joke, but he blames his rival for it, and there are faint rumors of a duel in the near future.
