THE WORKING MAN. "When we entered upon our great European war, our population was less than half what it is now. Laviah as was the squadering aft reasure, the expenditure of blood was greater. In the Army and Nay, not less than 500,000 of our most ablebodied producers were drawn from the labour to the killing market; and yet, withal, our productive powers increased so rapidly (almost in the ratio of the decrease; and we fought Napoleos, the great weaver in the loom of fate, with our weavers in cotton, and in woel. Monay was found wisseever money was wanted for the pur-pose of destruction; and yet it was power and to the cells of commerce. We have now fought Napoleos, the great weaver the the cells of commerce. We have now more than double, the capital we then possessed, and a great deal more than double the population—yet we are greatly more sensitive to the perils of war—our funds and our trade are in a far more ner-yous state. We seem as if we could bear the drain of hostilities less easily—the bin-den of trastion less lighty—the bin-den of trastion less lighty—the bin-den of trastion less in the factor. "One setting grows by what it foeds on." "One setting grows by what it foeds on the broad Atlantic, or doubles the Cape with the some, mothers or sisters that have some down interes or sisters that have some down interes or sisters that have some and out the perils of mere main and it is the borne affection rises and the ashes of the hearth of mere national ity — Then trade and commerce gradually "When we entered upon our great <text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text><text> in wages in one direction is equilised ulti-mately by an increase in mother. If the collier charges more for heating the baker's orgine, the baker must have more for his bread. If the farmer gets high prices for his statle, or the grazier for his wool, he has to pay more for the feather of his shoes and hanness, and an advance to the tailor and hosier on his clothes. At first sight, indeed, this scenar to result morely in a the-ory of compensation. But under a system of free trade its end must be the ruin of trade. Our chief, indeed our sole depend-more for progress, for azistence as a nation, is on our foreign trade. Let it he clearly seen, therefore, by our readers of the vorking classes that.—First, No single trade can long enjoy a rate of wages greatly in stocess of these of their tyrants, and the high prise trade with the ore hand will be have a directly scenario of their tyrants, and the high stoced.—If all trades have their wages raised, none, will benefit by a general states of the article will shock the demand bases the anione of their tyrants, and the high prised of level, scenarist the increased wages released with the one hand will be abaseted by the enhanced price of compo-tions of the article will shock the demand baset of the trade have their wages raised, none, will benefit by a general states are by the enhanced price of compo-tions will interest price of commo-tions and with the other. Third.—While no subtantial improvement in the shoolator is baset at its of the rest of the word, then a we will be gradually estate out of production will thereby be so raised above the level of that of the rest of the word, that we will be gradually estate out of production will the ordy be so raised above the level of that of the rest of the word, that we will be gradually estate out of
