Whitehead, the popular station agent of the Boston & Maine railroad, was married last evening to Miss Martha K. Gaus, younger daughter of the late Stephen Gaus. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John W. Buckman of the Crombie street church, at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. William Powers, No. 38 Essex street. The rooms were very prettily decorated, the couple being married in front of a bank of flowers. Only immediate family friends were present. The bride wore a handsome dress of cream Pina cloth, made over with white satin, trimmed with lace and satin ribbon, and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Miss Annie Powers, a little niece of the bride, was maid of honor. The couple received many useful and beautiful presents, among them an elegant sideboard from the Boston & Maine associates of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead will reside at No. 30 Summer street, and will receive their friends on Wednesday evenings in June. The bride is a sister of representative J. D. H. Gaus and of Editor C. H. Gaus of the Waltham Evening News." [Mr. Whitehead went to Salem only a very few years ago in a humble position, but by energy, honorable conduct and intelligence, has risen to his present responsible and lucrative position.—Herald.]

A HEAVY FAILURE.

C. H. B. Fisher, Lawyer and Private Banker, Banker.

The sensation of the week in Fredericton has been the business failure of C. H. B. Fisher who, with his late brother, G. Fred. Fisher, carried on a private banking business in this city for the past few years, and formerly practised law. The crash came on Wednesday, when Mr. Fisher made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to Herman Pitts. There are a great many stories on the street regarding the failure, but the following will probably be found pretty near the truth:

Though it has been pretty generally known throughout the city since the death of G. Fred. Fisher that the affairs of the deceased estate and of the firm of Fisher & Fisher (of which the deceased and his brother, C. H. B. Fisher, were members) were in a very bad state, the announcement of the assignment of C. H. B. Fisher created a genuine sensation. The failure was precipitated by the pressure of the liabilities of the late G. Fred. Fisher in connection with the partnership business, which followed quickly upon his death.

The liabilities and assets are as already stated, viz: liabilities between $55,000 and $60,000; and assets between $30,000 and $35,000. Mr. Fisher's two sons, Dr. Bayard Fisher, who has just graduated from Toronto medical college, and Walter S. Fisher, who has for the past three or four years been connected with the business of the firm of Fisher & Fisher, are secured by mortgages upon real estate for money loaned to their father several years ago, the former for $5,000 upon the homestead and for $10,000 upon the brick building—the Fisher building—on the corner of Queen and York streets, and the latter for $5,000 upon the homestead.

Mr. Fisher had three sons—Harry, Bayard and Walter—by his first wife, who died some fifteen or sixteen years ago, and each of these inherited a handsome estate stated at $20,000, upon their mother's death. Harry Fisher died not long after his mother's death, his estate vesting in his father. In connection with this it will be remembered by many legal gentlemen that Mr. Fisher carried an appeal to the Supreme court of Canada, in which he was successful.

Some years afterwards Mr. Fisher erected a handsome residence on the corner of Brunswick and church streets, and to build this residence he borrowed $10,000 from his sons—Bayard and Walter, $5,000 from each—and it is for these amounts that the mortgages mentioned above were given. Upon purchasing his brother's (G. Fred. Fisher) moiety in the Fisher building on the corner of York and Queen streets a few years later he borrowed another $10,000 from his son Bayard, securing him on this loan by a mortgage also.

With the exception then of the sons, there are no secured creditors and the trust debt is so much per month for his services as C. H. B. Fisher and the late G. Fred. Fisher entered into co-partnership as attorneys some twenty-three or twenty-four years ago and for many years had a fairly large practice in this city. About eight or ten years ago they began to engage in a private banking business and gradually dropped out of the practice of law, so that for the past five or six years they have been practically out of the legal profession.

They took hold of J. A. Thompson, general agent, and formed a co-partnership with him under the name and style of Thompson & Co., dealing in organs, sewing machines, books and several other lines. This business, of course, they owned independently of their banking business, and they were for a couple of years generally considered to be Making a good thing out of it. About a year ago they had a disagreement with Mr. Thompson and severed all connection with him. Since then C. H. B. Fisher has stated that the (Fisher & Fisher) dropped over $30,000 in the Thompson business.

Walter Fisher, who, as stated above, has been connected with the Fisher & Fisher firm for the past four or five years, is understood not to have been connected as a partner, nor to any greater extent than that he loaned money to the firm upon a guarantee of 7 per cent interest. He is said to have invested over $10,000 in the Thompson general agency business. The firm as bankers did a large business, and it was not until after the death of G. Fred. Fisher that anybody supposed that it was not absolutely sound. For two or three years, however, previous to his death G. Fred. Fisher seems to have been going behind. He made large drafts from the firm and secured many personal loans and endorsements from his brother, C. H. B. Fisher. To secure the latter and provide for his (G. Fred.) liabilities as a partner in the firm he Assigned All His Insurance Policies to him, aggregating $12,000. The insurance money was all paid to C. H. B. Fisher, and the latter says he was confident it would liquidate all the deceased's liabilities. He intended with this money to pay off all his deceased brother's indebtedness and had actually paid out over $7,000 of it when notes, bonds and other obligations came piling in upon him from all sources, some carrying the personal signature of G. Fred. Fisher and others the firm's signature, Fisher & Fisher, and it became apparent to C. H. B. Fisher that insolvency was at hand and an assignment for the benefit of creditors the only resource. The liabilities of G. Fred. Fisher and Fisher and Fisher, which thus crowded in upon C. H. B. Fisher immediately after the former's death, aggregated about $25,000. Gerhardus Clowes, of Oranmore, presented three or four notes made by G. F. Fisher in favor of Fisher & Fisher and endorsed to him by the firm name, representing between $3,000 and $4,000. Nelson Cliff held notes to the extent of $5,000. Miss Rebecca Russell, sister of the late Wm. E. Russell, at one time associated in the law business with Fisher & Fisher, to the extent of $1,000; John McCann, to the extent of $1,500; Miss Matilda Barker, of this city, to the extent of $500, and Mrs. Geo. Gilman, to the extent of $400. Besides these, it is said all the banks in the city are involved, but to what extent cannot be ascertained.

The assets consist, besides the real estate above specified, of central fire insurance stock, mortgages, bonds and notes, and household furniture.

LOOKS WELL ON PAPER.

But it is Doubtful if any of the Bogardus Money Reaches York County.

There was a great gathering of brewers in Fredericton, Wednesday and Thursday, and the kind of a gentleman named Bogardus stands in such terror, and whom the finance minister used to abhor, but brewers from Keswick who want to secure a slice from the Bogardus estate of New York, which the publisher's gentleman named Fonda from Gotham, is anxious to work up for the benefit of himself—and the brewers. Mr. Fonda arrived Wednesday and registered at the Commercial hotel. By arrangement the same evening, he met some fifty men and women of the Brewer family who mostly reside on the Keswick in this county, and they listened attentively to what Mr. Fonda had to say. Chas. A. Miles was appointed secretary of the York representatives and Mr. Fonda gave an introductory address to the meeting. His starting point was the marriage of Jacobus Brewer to Annetti Bogardus in 1862. By the aid of his genealogical chart he traced the family down to 1785. He then read to the audience what he represented as the will of the great grand parents of Annetti, which will, he announced, was made and executed in Holland in 1810. He also read what he claimed to be the original will of Negerer Seleyus, widow of Henrick Coch, whose daughter married Wilfred Webber of Holland. Wilfred Webber's daughter married Rev. Everhardus Bogardus, whose eldest son William, married Jacobus Brewer. Through these unions lies the claim of the Brewer family on the estates in Holland and what is known as the Trinity church property in New York. As to the Harlem commons, Mr. Fonda read a copy of a grant which takes in the entire township of Harlem. This grant he says was confirmed in 1688 by Thomas Douglas. A large portion of the Harlem property was appropriated for the enlargement and improvement in 1866. Mr. Fonda read an opinion of the Hon. Richard D. Webb, chief justice of the court, made in 1870, which opinion is favorable to the heirs. A portion of the money paid for that property taken by the title of the Harlem commons, with a number of other genealogical and biographical records. He also showed to his audience a copy of the coat of arms of the Webber family, around which were some genealogical records, the first date being 1610.

Mr. Fonda also addressed the heirs Thursday morning and again the same afternoon he gave some further information. Mr. Fonda is not asking for any pedigree or proofs of heirship. His plan is to get the family to form an association, and to have a duly appointed secretary to communicate with him in all matters affecting the property, the members of the association to pay him so much per month for his services as he may see fit to charge. He also said that such time as he can get the affairs far enough advanced to go into the courts. Then they are to make another contract to supply the funds to see the matter through to completion.

The brewers have not yet arrived at any conclusion with regard to taking hold of Fonda's scheme, and the latter has returned to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Inglis left Thursday for their new home at London, Ont. Previous to their departure, some of Mr. Inglis' friends, through T. Carleton Allen, presented him with a handsome piece of silver plate, suitably engraved.

In Durance Vile. John Carson, who belongs to Dumfries but who has lived in Fredericton recently, is one of the victims of the Fisher failure. He made notes in favor of Fisher & Fisher, and he gave the proceeds to Fisher, who endorsed them. A few days ago Carson filed a claim against the Fisher estate for $400 for three years of such service, and a day or two afterwards was arrested on a capias, at the suit of Dugald McEachern, on two accommodation notes which he had made in favor of Fisher. Carson has no property and is now in jail for want of bail.
