The High Court of Justice. The following are the cases tried before Mr. Justice Paterson, which did not appear in our last issue:

ing them, because they were devoid of sufficient energy to assist them in retaining the favor of God's grace. He explained to them that for their state, the word relapse was too good to apply to them. He referred to St. Gregory's mention of Julian the Apostate, that the terms Apostate was giving him too much honor, inasmuch as that Julian had never had the grace of God in his soul. The rev. missionary concluded with hoping the goal resolves of the congregation were sincere, and their attendance at church was truly owing to an earnest wish to be joined together in earnest thanksgiving to God for his goodness, and to lead the exalted lives of Christians. The sermon was listened to with devout attention by the whole congregation, embracing many from the different denominations.
