THIEVING.—Last night a beautiful and very valuable snuff-lox was stolen from the Arts' Exhibition. The lid and the bottom were of onyx and amethyst, and the setting gold. The box was the property of Mr. John Mickle, who has lately returned from his European tour and exhibited, it, with a number of other curiosities. It is evident there is somebody in Guelph who is of a more practical than theoretical turn of mind, one who prefers something real to mere empty show, and who would rather possess something intrinsically valuable than look upon the masterpieces of a Titian or a Corregio. Seriously the thief was a most foolish, fellow. Any thief is so who will steal an article so rare, for there are fair grounds for the supposition that he stole it on account of its value, and not for its uniqueness, and any attempt on his part to dispose of it will be sure to bring him into an impense a mount of transile. The pose of it will be sure to bring him into an immense amount of trouble. The wisest thing that the person who took the snuff-box ever did would be to return it quietly, and save himself the shame and prosecution.

Liability of Express Companies.

A case was recently tried in Brooklyn, N. Y. in which an express company contested a claim of about two thousand dollars for the loss of a trunk and its contents. The defence set up was that on the back of the receipt given to the owner of the trunk it was stipulated that the company would not hold itself liable for any jewlery nor for any value over one hundred dollars. Such printed notice, it was contended, was a contract which, when accepted, bound the owner of property entrusted to their care. The judge held that in the hurry of railroad travel it would be impossible for every person to read the printed matter of such receipts before accepting them, and he therefore instructed the jury to bring in the verdict, which they did, for the full amount claimed. This will be looked upon by the travelling public as a very just decision. If it were otherwise it would be a profitable business for the employees of express companies to lose the trunks of travellers, very few of which contain as little as one hundred dolars' worth of wearing appeal and other necessaries. A lady's silk dress would almost reach that amount in value.

Export of Cheese and Butter to Bri-tain.

150 persons out of employment, and deprives the vicinity of a home market for the large quantity of flax grown in the adjoining townships.

SAD AND FATAL ACCIDENT.—John Peat, son of Thomas Peat, near the village of Ratho, township of Blandford, on Wednesday the 2nd ult., went to his father's field for a horse with which he intended to go to the Ayr Show, and nothing was seen or heard of him till the following Friday noon, when he was found lying in the field badly kicked and bruised by a vicious horse. He was just barely alive, almost unable to speak and ided that same evening.

WATERLOO OIL WELL.—There is a stagnation in the boring business up in Waterloo. The efforts of the company that sought for oil at the depth of 1100 feet and found brine, have slightly exhausted their strength, and they have halted by tacit consent and are taking a rest. The brine has not yet been tested, and the Chronicle not liking this inactivity, wants to know why there is not a meeting called? It is probably because the Company has reason for belleving that Waterloo is not a second Goderich.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, NOV. 7TH.

The Commons having re-assembled in their Chamber,
Sir John A. Macdonald introduced a Bill respecting the administration of the oath of office.

Sir John A. Macdonald moved that His Excellency's Speech be taken into consideration to morrow.—Carried.

Hon. Mr. Dorion inquired whether there was any truth in the rumour that one or more of the gentlemen on the Treasury benches had sent in their resignations. He said it was a matter of importance that the public should be informed of the truth of these reports, and also when explanations would be given.

Sir John A. Macdonald, in reply, said that the Secretary of State for the Provinces, Hon. Mr. Archibald, having failed to secure his seat in the House, placed his resignation in His Excellency's hands, and it had been accepted. That gentlemen now merely held office until his successor was appointed. The Hon. Minister of Finance had also resigned his office. His resignation had been accepted, and he merely holds office till his successor should be appointed. Explanations would be given to morrow.

After his proscription in Italy in 1834, he went to Brazil, and before long was ardently engaged in assisting the struggling Republic of the Rio Grande. He married while there, amid the perils and hardships of war, the heroic Annita, who in September, 1840, became the mother of Monotti. The boy was cradled in danger. For days the water, flooding the plains, was up to the bellies of the horses, and in crossing the rivers the father slung the little funded of the manity in a handkerchief which he tied around his neck. The earlier years of his life were all thus passed in an atmosphere of war and tumult, and his father's subsequent career has left him little leisure to do otherwise than to follow and study it. What wonder that has name and blood have made him an aarly actor in the stirring scenes of Italian revolution.

The King of Prussia is said to have had a narrow escape of his life in a Wurtemberg railway. The train in which his Majesty was travelling was speet through running into a cart drawn by oxen, near Gippengen, which w
