But it was the noon of night when Mrs. Vereton again sought her dead, and an started with a proud gesture of intol-erance as she saw the slender figure of the girl she had adopted kneeling beside the cofin, her face buried in the velvet pall. And as the girl lifted her blanched young face, the woman who had held her to her heart as a daughter, motioned imperiously for her to make way for her—the widow ! "How dare you come here to see your work?" Mrs. Vereton cried hoarsely. "You have murdered him, and destroyed alike the soul and life of my infatuated sonl It was about you they quarreled; it alike the soul and life of my infatuated soul It was about you they quarreled; it is to you I owe it that my son has shed his father's blood! Your baby face was the cause of all this. It won my boy by its un-worthy beauty to disobey and defy his parents. It stood between his heart and the mother on whose bosom he has lain. It stained his sonl with morder with the It stained his soul with murder-with the blood of his father!"

Three years have told their four-fold tale of budding, fruitage, decline and death, and Mrs. Vereton, sitting alone at her desolate hearth, is thinking drearily of the past. She is thinking of Helen Lee now, and her thoughts are neither kind nor lov-ing; the door opens slowly and a slender figure crosses the threshold and advances into the room as Mrs. Vereton, looking up, aw the dark syes and perfect features of the girl whom she once was so kind to, she arose with a haughty frown; but her face the girl whom she once was so kind to, she arose with a haughty frown; but her face blanched sadly; she regarded the intruder in a haughty silence, which the latter was first to break. "You bade me come to you, madam," she said in tones that had desolate notes of pain in their young music, "when I could take the stain of blood from Gerald's could take the stain of blood from certain s soul. has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other ad-vertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally be-lieved by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished, the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh. --Montreal
