The Midlanders, every one of them, left the city last night with the very highest orlinion of Toronto heapitality. I was announced by bulletins in various parts of the city that the Midlanders would probably reach Union station about 3 p.m., but it was 5.45 exactly before the Toronte. Grey and Bruce train, made up of eight passenger coaches, drew up outside the depot on the south side. The tunults of applauses and waving of handkerchiefs that greeted the sunburnt boys from the central counties of Ontarie were wild and almost beggar description.

About 9.15 yesterday morning the noble steamship Alberts steamed up to her dook in Owen Sound's pretty harbor. The town was active long before that hour, and fits approaches awaiting the arrival of the steamship. Flags, bunting, flowers and verifices and the sunburnt boys from the steamship. Flags, bunting, flowers and verifices were profusely displayed. Besides these emblems of joy, the citizens had the statement of the manner possible. Among the first to alight from the train was Major Henry R. Smith, who succeeded to the command of the Midland battalion after the death of the late Lieut. Col. A. T. H. Williams. Major Smith is a dashing young officer, and looks every inch of him a soldier. He is a son of the late Sir Henry Smith, of Kingston, and is an officer of the house of commons at Ottawa. The Midland battalion, as it was sent to the front, is a provisional corps, and is composed of companies from the 15th, 40th, 45th, 49th and 57th battalious. They are a real fine body of young fellows, and among their numbers are some of the bravestof Ontario's sons. The total strength of the battalion, as it reached the city vesterday, was 346 alt told. There were 30 officers and 316 men. Both the officers and men were completely overwhelmed by the magnitude and enthusiasm of the reception they received. Some of them were nearly dambfounded. The battalion was formed into companies beside the train and when they were ready to march they were walcome and they were ready to march they were walcome was a station at Quebec. Bon voyage.

Throughout the day and evening the weather was beautiful and all that could be desired. It will be one long remembered in Toronto. A number of wounded volunteers arrived in the city on the steamboat express. They were Hospital Sergeant Labat, Gunner Reyaolds, Sergeant Anderson, Bombadier Gordon, all of B Battery. The two first named were sent to the Toronto general hospital and the others went on to Quebec. Sergt.—Major Spackman, Privates Dunn, Joudell, Adair and Zwick of C company; Bombadiers Bridgeford and Taylor, Gunners Porter, Featherstone, Boutillier, Richardson, Marshall and Millie of A Battery. The reception tendered the Midlanders and the Voltigeurs de Quebec (9th battalion) by the citizens yesterday afternoon and last night was nothing short of a genuine evation. If the event can be taken as a Criterion, the entrance to the city of our ewn volunteers will be the greatest military spectacle ever witnessed in Toronto, as far as enthusiasm is concerned at least. Although the vast crowds that thronged the streets all afternoon and until midnight.

The city's guests, as stated above, had to be seated in two relays. As each man left the dining-room he was presented with a choice eigar (a great luxury indeed) by W. E. Dobson. The committee also entertained the four bands, the policemen that with commendable success kept the streets clear, and last but not least themselves. While the feast was going on the scene outside the hotel was an unusual one. The Market square was a regular jam of humanity, while the market building itself was black with people who had climbed to every part of the big structure.

It was about 8.15 before every one had been fed. About this time the Midlanders began, between vigorous puffs at their

From all appearances therefore it looks as if the reception festivities will have to be postponed. Instead of being a disappointment to Toronto's people, this delay ought rather incite them to further and heartier efforts to make the welcome and heartier efforts to make the welcome an even greater and grander one than if it came off to-morrow. They have two more days for preparation, and ought to make the most of them. Let everybody decorate, even if with nothing more than a little banner and branch of evergreens. If rain is threatened the perishable decorations can be taken down until the storm blows

The misunderstanding between the reception committee and the home troops was on Saturday settled to the satisfaction of all as follows: The home troops, consisting of the Grenadiers and Queen's Own, with the ex-members and school children, will meet the troops from the Northwest at North Toronto station, and opening ranks allow the men from the Northwest to pass through. After this they are to close ranks and march direct to the city hall square and form up there to give another reception upon their comrades' arrival there. The Garrison artillery under Captain McMurrich will be drawn up on one side of the city hall square and up on one side of the city hall square and await the march in there; and twelve noncommissioned officers from Col. They declared they had never seen anything like it before. North Toronto was reached at 11.15. The luncheon committee regaled the boys with foaming mugs of Bob Davies' lager. After drinking a couple of glasses a big strapping private rubbed his stomach enthusiastically and exclaimed; "Bon garcon, bon garcon," Then the regiment was drawn up into line, and Col. Aynot made a speech from the saddle. He thanked Mayor Manning, the reception committee and the citizens generally for the ovation given his regiment. The colonel's remarks were very patriotic. He hoped the rebellion would be the means of strengthening the ties that united the different provinces of the confederacy. [Cheers]. If ever Ontario needed any help to defend her rights, she could call on Quebec. [Loud and prolonged cheers]. Mayor Manning replied to Col. Amyot. Lieut. Myles (Toronto Field Battery) was seen soon after the arrival of the Midlands toting a hero along King street in great shape. The hero was sunburnt up to regulation, but he had a smart new tunic, good boots, etc. He proved to be the lieutenant's brother, Percy, a color-sergeant of the Midland. He was being conducted up to the lieutenant's house, in order that he might indulge in the luxury of a big wash. Every few steps he was stopped by some one who wanted to shake hands, and at last refuge had to be taken in a hack in order to reach the house.
