SAVE YOUNG SOWS

To increase the production of pigs, young sows intended for the butcher must be saved this Fall. Next Spring's "Keep a Pig" propaganda, aimed at the residents of small towns and suburbs of cities, added to the normal avenues of sale, ensure a record demand for the progeny of all these sows. Elsewhere will be found a business statement from Prof. J. M. Trueman, indicating the probable profits. Be sure to read it. Try to plan things so that you will keep one or two more sows than in former years.

An Attempt to Bring Buyers and Sellers Together

There may be, in response to this appeal, those wishing to purchase sows for breeding purposes who do not know where to buy them. On the other hand we already have the names of some 25 farmers who have sows to sell and we solicit the names of others. If you are either a prospective buyer or seller and do not know of anyone with whom you can do business send your name to Prof. J. M. Trueman, Agricultural College, Truro. He does not guarantee to personally make any sales or purchases, but he will try to bring prospective buyers and sellers together. Write him at once.

The man who plans to respond to the strong appeal of Food Controllers Hoover and Hanna to speed up hog production by saving young sows this Fall wisely considers the business as well as the patriotic side of the venture. Sows are worth high figures and the necessary winter feed is proportionately high. It is not to be wondered if doubts as to financial returns are entertained. With an aim to settle this question we obtained some facts forth:

when skim milk, garbage and other waste material was used. Now for the returns.

An average sow will raise 8 pigs and frequently 10 to12. Sucking pigs will sell next Spring at $5.00 or more apiece, which means a gross return from the sow of at least $40.00 to be set against a cost of $24.00 for maintenance. The sow herself will be worth as much as when the feeding began endoubt the market for young pigs next Spring, relative to which we should point cut that the "Keep a Pig" movement, like the "Town Garden" movement of last Spring, is sure to interest hundreds of suburban dwellers in feeding pigs next year, and this demand added to the normal demand promises a bigger sale for young pigs than the total available supply.
