

Sometimes, he told his pastor, he gave seventeen hours in the week to the study of his Sunday School lesson. Few preachers give that time to the preparation of their two sermons. Yet this busy man of affairs, carrying on great commercial enterprises, reaching to the very Antipodes, found time for such earnest study of the Word of God.

In Walter E. H. Massey the man and the Christian were more than even the merchant and manufacturer. He grew up in a Methodist household, surrounded by the best and sweetest associations of Christian family life. The sons of the household used specially to delight in paying their tribute of affection to a mother's love and a mother's devotion. As a young man Mr. W. E. H. Massey became identified with Sunday School and church work. While making a business tour of the world, and especially while visiting the sacred scenes of the life and labors of our Lord, he found time to write home a series of very interesting and instructive letters to his Bible-class.

A few months ago we invited Mr. Massey to contribute to a symposium in this periodical on the best methods of carrying on Sunday School work, especially of retaining the interests of young men and securing their personal conversion to God. Although such a busy man, Mr. Massey kindly complied with our request, and his wise counsels and suggestions were printed in a recent number of this Sunday School teachers' magazine. In like manner Mr. Massey contributed also wise and thoughtful counsels on business methods to young men in the columns of The Christian Guardian.

Small wonder that the tributes of the pulpit and the press to the memory of this good man were of the most generous character. Truly in him are the words of Scripture fulfilled, "Being dead, he yet speaketh." He rests from his labors, but his works do follow him.

"The memory of the just Smells sweet and blossoms in the dust."

Methodist Magazine and Review for 1902.

THIS Magazine and Review offers for 1902 the best programme of contents it has ever presented. No magazine ever published in Canada has reached like this its fifty-fourth volume. The leading writers of Methodism, both at home and abroad, and many others, will contribute to its pages.

A very full and comprehensive programme has been prepared, which is announced in part in our advertising pages. It is the purpose of both Publisher and Editor to make this Magazine and Review a welcome visitor—a bright, cheery, inspiring and instructive guest in the Methodist homes of this Dominion. Please note the special prominence given to Canadian, Methodist, missionary, social, and religious topics.

The department of the World's Progress, treating the stirring events of the times, religious and missionary, and the trend of religious thought and work, will be fully treated, and the progress of science.

A lady correspondent of literary culture and refinement in the United States writes that it is the best monthly received at their house, although they have the reading of ten of the foremost.

We ask the co-operation of our friends to aid us by counsel and suggestion in the still further improvement of this periodical. One great dependence is, of course, upon the ministers, who are its authorized and official agents. By their aid its past success has been secured, and it is confidently hoped that it will share the prosperity of the growing time of our country. To aid them in the vigorous canvass the November and December numbers will be given free to new subscribers. A liberal scale of premiums at nominal cost will be offered.

SPECIAL OFFER TO SCHOOLS.

A special reduction is given to schools taking copies of this Magazine for circulation in their libraries. Two or more copies so taken will be furnished for $1.60 each. This includes the November and December numbers free to new subscribers—fourteen numbers for $1.60, or about 11½ cents per number of ninety-six closely printed, well-illustrated pages. Many schools have taken this periodical for several years, some in quantities as large as ten or more copies. They have found it more interesting, instructive, up-to-date, and economical than any other way of purchasing good literature.

PREMIUMS.

Subscribers so desiring may secure copies of Withrow's "Barbara Heck," "Neville Trueman," "Lawrence Temple," or "Valeria," at 30 cents each, post free; regular price, 75 cents.
