

Constitution Act, 31 George III., c. 31, divides Canada into two provinces—Form of Government—The above-named Acts of Parliament the cause of all the Canadian troubles—Mistake in allowing French to be the recording language, and in giving constitutional government before the people were ready to receive it—First House of Assembly—Proportion of English and French members—Gradual change in character of delegates—Impeachment of judges—Repeated reference to Parliament—Lord Aylmer entreats the Assembly to bring forward all their grievances at once—Commission of Inquiry—Stoppage of supplies—Distress of public officers—Rebellion—Thorne's conduct—Arrival of Lord Durham—Review—Responsible Government—Enumeration of the defects of the system—Remedies suggested 227

CHAPTER VII.

APPLICATION OF THE FACTS CONTAINED IN THIS WORK.

Value of the preceding history to Members of Parliament and the Republican party in Europe—The question considered whether a Republican Government, like that of America, can exist in England or France: Firstly, With reference to the history of the first attempt at colonization, and herein of the condition of America at the time—The people who