THE REAL FIGHTERS.

NDER THE RELENTLESS exposures that the war has brought about many bogies and traditions have gone by the board. For instance, the belief, widespread four years ago, that the Germans were the greatest fighters in the world's history has been scattered to the winds for ever and ever. That the kaiser possessed the greatest organization for war is unquestionably the case, but as a fighter the individual Teuton is hopelessly outdistanced by the Allied rank and "Warrior nation" was the term tacked on the Prussians by admiring writers and the world has come to accept it as a fact, a fact that carried a shiver to a more or less scared civilization. But it required less than six months of warring to show up the Prussian as a second-rater in the matter of physical courage.

sources of the paper trust. The paper trust has the most powerful of influences at its back, and when publishers have gone to certain members of the cabinet in the hope of being relieved of the possibility of facing absolute ruin they have been reminded that the Government is a partner in the newspaper business (to the extent of $50,000), and that it would be just as well to submit to the 'reasonable' demands of the newsprint makers. Some day there shall be written the It has been explained that labor costs have arisen complete history of the Vagrant Heart, tremendously. But it is not recalled that most of and that history will contain a succesthe pulp lands, which form the sources of news- sion of strange episodes situated in print, were given to the paper-makers by the will be no swashbuckling tale of shippeople of Canada through their lawmakers. people of Canada through their lawmakers. No share of this heritage for the people who read and pay for the pulp, however! Get the last dollar the trade will stand. The Government has appointed a commissioner. Let the buyer beware!

The Advertiser has entered protests before over the acceptance by the Canadian newspapers of any grants that would form the basis for a belief that the press of Canada was subsidized. It believes that there should be no further acceptance of this grant, which was supposed to enable the papers to bind east and west together, but which has not resulted in any wonderful transformation in the relations of the great divisions of the Canadian people. So long as the newswhich has not resulted in any wonderful trains formation in the relations of the great divisions of the Canadian people. So long as the newspapers of Canada accept this grant they are bound to the Government as recipients of special favors, no matter how much they may protest to the contrary. It is a German idea of controlling the press, whether the intention was German or not. Let this subsidy be refused when next the opportunity has come! Then will the field be clear for dealings with the Government and its profiteers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It was a matchless Sunday.

Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling?

The great peace drive went to pieces.

The bells of Belgrade will be joy-ringing.

Taluno! He might have stayed on Taluno, the island beautiful, but—that is one of the spisode. Back in his home city of Ackland they hailed him as an adventurer. His mother proudly exhibited him and cunningly planned his marriage, hoping thereby to keep him at home among his kind. Dutifully, though somewhat bored, he escorted her about—to be inspected and quizzed and smiled upon, for there was an unconscious bit of foreign air about him that added to the mystery which the wind and sun of many lands had cast in his eyes and blended in the tan of his face.

Hence it was that on a certain night not long after his return he accompanied his mother to the Ackland School of Art to view the annual spring exhibit there. His mother was a patron of something was a hobby of hers—and Burke himself had contributed largely to the museum from the fruits of his travels. Like an automaton he shook the hands of dozens of very much alike young women, and boys so evidently courting gentlus and flowing ties—and then suddenly the hand he found in his was not the streetyped, nervous hand, but a warm, flexible hand of substance. She herself was a living, breathing, elastic thing of gold, it seemed. Her hair, almost black, with its hint of golden shadows—the ivory gold of her skin—and her eyes, those oriental I-ould-love-you eyes—all reminded him of Taluno and—Ahmeenah. girl of the moment in memory of Ahmeenah, the girl of the past. There she stood high up on the rock above him, poised against the sky for her dive into the deep pool below, her dusky hair waving like a banner in the wind—then his heart turned sick at the memory of her faulty step, his mad rush that was too late to break the fall of her lovely body that lay broken and still on the rocks at his feet. With a tired sigh he slipped out of the noisy chattering throng that filled the great room and sought the lower corridor, where he sat on a stone bench and smoked deliberately in violation of all the rules.

Twenty minutes later he ascended the steps again. At the landing as he turned the corner of the stair he looked upward and there stood the girl of living gold with her hand on the rail poised in the act of descending. For a moment she gazed on him thus and then descended slowly, and when they met at the rail in the centre of the flight—they smiled. "You are so very young," he said, as if having made a strange discovery. She half turned to lean back against the sky for her dusky hair the deep pool below, her dusky hair the sky for her dusky hair the deep pool below, her dusky hair the styring like a banner in the wind—then his heart turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned slok at the memory of the redusky hair turned s

The gesture of her hand, the supple twist of her body as she stood there, the poise of her head, the glance of her eyes and the curve of her cheek—each was representative of some one charm of those others of his past.

by their masterly strategy, and, apparently, their ability to save their lives by placing hands above their heads. As for the navy, why "my navy is holding its own against the united enemy naval forces, and is unwaveringly supporting the army in its struggle." "Holding its own" is good. The German navy has been holding its own ships and men safely in shelter since war began.

But while the army and navy has been brave the kaiser has decided that after all he will not smash to pieces all those who now oppose him. It was different in 1914, of course. He discovered that they would not be smashed, and he has resolved once more to offer peace to the enemy—an honorable peace, to be sure. The kaiser is suffering from delusions as to the quotations on peace at the present time. His bid is low and he was not asked to chip in. And peace is not on the auction block to be sold for offers. Peace is obtainable only by the grace of the Allies.

The kaiser's new chancellor now talks "population" for Germany. They have what they seem to have what they seem there. The crimes of the all-highest and his war lords have been repeatedly backed to the limit by the German people.

The kaiser tells his troops he intends to get an honorable peace for Germany. Wrong again, Bill. The German people are going to be sent to jail just like any other outlaw gang until they are solved once more to offer peace to the enemy—about that.

THE STICK HABIT.

[London Daily Chronicle.]

The stick habit is much more common in England than in America. In New York or Boston or Chicago, or any other American town, for that matter, you seldom see youngish man carry a stick. As a general thing, he is too busy to be bothered with a piece of wood in his hand. He carries his paper, of course, and he must have one hand free for a cigar and for raising his hat.
