WESTMINSTER CHOIR.

Our People Will Have the Opportunity of Hearing This Superior Company of Artists.

The visit to Canada of the Westminster Abbey Glee and Concert Party (under the direction of Mr. ward Branscombe), is certainly an event which may be mentioned to be a red letter day in the history of Canadian music.

It is probably the earnest desire of everyone to ultimately make the journey to the Old Country and above all things pay a visit to Westminster Abbey and hear the wonderful choral services there and whilst it has not yet been found practicable to transport the historical building to this side of the water it will not now be necessary to journey farther than the opera house to hear what musical excellence emanates therefrom.

At the concert here in the opera house everything that is most delightful and attractive in the domain of old English (or rather British) music will find a place, from the old madrigal of the 16th century to the glee of the 18th century, and a part song or two of the 19th whilst in the solos there will be the choicest possible selection from the songs of the Old Country, including such favorites as "Robin Adair," Mary of Argyle," the old Cumberland song, "Oh the Oak and the Ash," "The Laird of Cockpen." The meeting of the waters," the old Scotch cradle song, "Oh, can ye sew cushions," "The Friar of Orders Grey," "The Ash Grove," "Phyllis is my only joy," "Annie Laurie" and many others. All these sung by artists of established reputation in London, England, should form a musical feast of unequalled pleasure and at the same time one of extreme variety.

A GENTLE WARNING.

Owners of orchards in the vicinity of the Victoria Park have good reason to complain of the depredations committed by the boys on every occasion of a ball game or other public gathering. During the game yesterday afternoon some choice apples in Dr. McKay's orchard were appropriated. If the fruit was fit for eating it would not be so bad, but the apples were hard as rocks and were evidently taken out of pure cussedness. The object of this paragraph is to utter a note of warning to the boys to discontinue such acts in future and thus avoid an interview with the police magistrate.

HELPING OUR NEWSPAPER.

There are more ways than one in which the readers of a newspaper can help it. A very important item of help is, of course, the financial support in the way of subscriptions and advertising. Occasionally a subscriber gets an exaggerated opinion of his importance in this respect and "stops" his paper because of some real or fancied oversight or mistake on the part of his newspaper, forgetting that he is only one out of hundreds and that while the aggregate is a large matter, the one has but a small effect on the total circulation. No publisher, however, despises the individual support in this respect. The reader can often assist materially in making his newspaper better by furnishing items of interest. No matter how large its staff of news gatherers they cannot be ubiquitous, and especially in the case of a local paper can assistance often be rendered by giving the office or the reporter an item of news. Such assistance is always welcomed. Then again a paper can be helped by the presentation through its columns of well-written letters on subjects of public importance. There is perhaps on this score a redundancy as well as a deficiency. There are in most communities persons who are ready to rush into print frequently and to contribute letters which are not of an edifying character. Sometimes it is difficult to get readers whose opinions would be really valuable on certain subjects to place them before the public in a letter written to a newspaper, but such letters when well written form a valuable help to making up a good newspaper. Editorial articles although supposed to be impersonal are after all to a great extent personal views, or views on certain subjects, presented as some aspects of them may present themselves to one or more minds. Strong, clear opinions from readers couched in appropriate language will command attention and make a newspaper of increased interest to other readers. The New York Sun has recently been congratulating itself in an editorial article on the quantity and quality of the correspondence which it has always been able to obtain from its readers. It has systematically encouraged them to use its columns to state their individual opinions, and in this way has been enabled to publish a great deal of very valuable matter, which it truly regards as one of the most valuable features of the paper. If a reader of any well-conducted paper has an idea on a subject well thought out the paper will always be glad to receive and publish it, but one or two points are essential in such letters. They should as a rule be brief, and personalities should be eschewed.

NOTICE TO LADIES.

Ladies wanted to learn dress-making in two weeks; none but good sewers need apply. I will give $10 to any one that can show me an article in dress-making they can't make after learning. I have taught over seventy girls this way, offered $10 to each, but not one could take it. Is there any wonder that not half the girls that learn can even make a wrapper after they are through. When you hem and baste six months in a shop, then get from two to four hours on your system. This way you must be good sewers to begin with, and instead of three to four hours, you get six days from eight o'clock till six to learn, not only your system but everything in dress-making. Every one can make a dress before paying. Ladies that I have taught have told me months after that they would not take $50 for what they learnt in the two weeks. Of course some people will say it can't be done. Well, the ones who have never learnt don't know anything about it and the ones who have it and say it can't be done don't know as much as they aught to. I have taught girls who have started a shop for themselves within a week or two after learning, and I have also taught quite a few that have been in shops from six to nine months and couldn't make anything. Remember it won't cost you anything to try and if you fail I will give you $10 for your trouble. I will teach in Ingersoll from the 2nd to 14th of September. All wishing to learn call at my rooms. First rooms upstairs, King street east, First rooms upstairs, King street east from Richardson's jewelry store, on Saturday, Aug. 31st, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A UNIQUE EXPERIENCE.

Rev. Wylie Clark, of Brampton, who is at present filling the pulpit at the First Presbyterian church during the pastor's absence, was a busy man last night. During the evening he conducted services at a private funeral on Mill street, led the usual Wednesday evening prayer meeting, performed a marriage ceremony on Eliza street, and later in the evening, performed the rite of baptism in another portion of the city. The reverend gentleman's experience is probably unique.—London Advertiser.

A ROAD TO GODERICH.

American Capitalists Want to Build One.

The following is from the Stratford Herald of Wednesday:

It looks very much as if Stratford would have an electric railway next year, not merely a local system, but a main line running through the city from Woodstock to Goderich. This would give connection with the C. P. R. and would not only be for passenger service but for the handling of freight of all kinds.

Mr. John A. Foster, formerly of this city, was in town yesterday. He represents Cleveland capitalists, who are looking for a good investment and who have an inclination to establish an electric railway in this city. Their plan at present is to build a line from St. Marys to Mitchell via Stratford. Mr. G. G. McPherson, K. C., has been in correspondence with them and Mr. Foster visited a number of prominent local men while in the city.

Chicago capitalists, however, have been in correspondence with Mr. McPherson in regard to a scheme which would prove of far greater benefit to Stratford and should interest merchants and others who are at present paying high freight rates. This is a proposed electric railway from Woodstock to Goderich, taking in Strathallan, Tavistock, Stratford, Sebringville, Mitchell, Seaforth, Clinton, and other intermediate points. It is only on paper yet, but citizens need not be surprised if the near future brings forth further developments.

As Mr. McPherson says, the building of such a road requires time. There must first be a company formed, a charter must be obtained from Parliament, right of way secured from municipalities and numerous other preliminaries gone through. Even then it is a serious matter to build a road for freight traffic. While light passenger machine could be run over the county bridges, freight cars, such as would certainly be run on the proposed line would require the building of special bridges and the cost of the 70 miles or so of road would certainly be large. But the investment would be a paying one, there may be steps taken to obtain a charter at the next session of parliament. At present there is only talk, but it is talk with a moral.

The city of Stratford would be benefited in many ways.

There would be a good local system.

There would be connection with the C.P.R. at Woodstock and a consequent cheapening of freight rates.

There would be connection with the lake routes at Goderich.

There would be a centralizing of the country trade at Stratford.

By an extension to St. Marys the trade from that district would be secured.

By a further extension to London there would be connection with the Lake Erie and Detroit River and Canadian Pacific Railways at that place, and, by the L.E. & D.R.R., a further connection with the Michigan Central at St. Thomas.

These are only a few of the many benefits to be derived. The Chicago capitalists or the Cleveland capitalists, or both, may take the matter in hand and present prospects point to steps being taken.

Something that would doubtless obviate the necessity of building the railway further than Seaforth is the fact that a company to be known as the Huron, Bruce and Middlesex Electric Road has been formed, and as soon as the necessary arrangements are made with the municipalities through which the road will be run, a charter will be obtained to complete the road at the earliest possible moment. Goderich has already granted a franchise.

The route of the line will be from Goderich to Dungannon, Lucknow, Wingham, Brussels, Seaforth and Bayfield and through the intervening townships. An hourly service will be run and every street in a town and village and every farm gate in a township will practically be a station. In addition to the passenger service, which will be the first object, it is the intention of the company to put on freight cars eventually.

The first section of the proposed road will be constructed between Goderich and Dungannon, and it is confidently expected that within a year that section will be completed and running on schedule time.

An agreement for running over this line to Goderich would probably be obtainable, as the expenses in connection with the H.B. & M. road promise to be heavy.

Although the subject of the new road is not likely to be brought before the city council for some time yet it is understood to be at present under the consideration of various aldermen who would like to see the line established.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR.

In our Keewaydin budget yesterday, a paragraph appeared to the effect that Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Gibson arrived on the island on Friday. It is perhaps needless for us to explain that the above was a typographical error, as Mr. Gibson has not yet joined the noble army of benedicts. The paragraph should have read "Mrs. Joseph and Mr. Thomas Gibson," etc.
