THE CZAR RESPONSIBLE. Defeats Attributed to the Actions of the Ruler of Russia.

New York, Feb. 13.—The blame for the Russian defeat in the Orient is openly attributed by the Russians to the Czar himself, according to a dispatch from Berlin, to the American. It continues that a high Russian official said: "The Czar's recent manifestoes were precisely an act of self-accusation. He cried peace when everybody else knew that peace was impossible. The loss of his warships at Port Arthur and Chemulpo awakened him to the realization of his illusion that war was avoidable. The Czar stubbornly tied the hands of our naval and military leaders, who knew that war was inevitable. There will be an official sequester, but the weight of the blame that is necessarily placed on the Russian arms must rest on the Czar himself."

A special cable to the American from Vienna says: "Underground divisions from St. Petersburg state that the Russian revolutionary party has issued a manifesto denouncing the war and declaring neutrality."

advantage of the outbreak of hostilities in the East to draw lessons in the science of war. The report that the Japanese had succeeded, by means of her naval forces, in taking Port Arthur was doubted by that officer, who pointed out that the advantage which land batteries would have over ships at a long range would almost preclude such a victory. He believed that it would be necessary in the capture of that port to have the cooperation of land forces.

and a boat from the British cruiser went out. Shortly afterwards the Variag and Korietz got under way and steamed out of the harbor...

The Japanese followed almost to the entrance of the harbor, firing on the Variag, which had a heavy list to port and was evidently in a sinking condition. The Korietz was apparently untouched.

The Variag lost thirty men and seven officers killed and forty-two wounded. Count Muro was killed on the bridge.

About six hundred shots were fired in all, but the firing was not accurate and the Variag was hit in only six places. One shot which struck near the water line amidships wrecked one of her engines.

When the Russians anchored off the entrance to the harbor the British cruiser Talbot sent four torpedoes towards her to her with a doctor and nurses. The United States gunboat Vicksburg also sent three torpedoes towards her.

The Korietz was abandoned at 3.30 p.m., her crew going on board the Pascal, and at 3.57 p.m. she blew up with a terrible explosion.

The Variag was abandoned soon afterwards, her officers deciding the situation hopeless. Her deck went left on account of the explosion.

The crew of the Variag went on board the Talbot, the Elba and the Vicksburg. The Variag burned until 6 p.m., when a tremendous explosion, the flames ignited her ammunition. Then she sank.

The Russians eventually went from the Pascal to the steamship Sungail. A Russian officer told the captain of the Vicksburg that he had come to ask asylum for one night only.

The Japanese squadron of 15 vessels began the bombardment of Port Arthur. The Russians reported that the battle lasted forty minutes.

The Japanese squadron could not stand the well-placed fire of our fleet, and particularly of the forts, and began a rapid retreat.

The Japanese flagship was seriously damaged, and according to the testimony of an eye-witness, five other Japanese ships were considerably injured.

Boats report that two Japanese ships sank at sea. Our losses after were two officers wounded, one killed and forty-five men killed and forty-five wounded.

The bombardment of the fortress and the town was continued, but frightened the people. At intervals during the night firing was heard at sea.

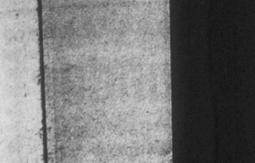

The disposition is that the temper of the army and navy is excellent, and that the bulletins circulated by the Novoe Krai have begun to tranquilize the people. No attempts have been made by the Japanese to land on the Kwong Tung peninsula.

The repairs to the ships damaged by the torpedo attack are proceeding rapidly. LAST WEEK'S FIGHTS.

Owing to Damage to Russian Warship, the Army Depend on Ports For Protection. Chefoo, Feb. 15.—The steamer Wenchow, arriving from Port Arthur, reports that eleven Russian ships were struck on Monday's and Tuesday's engagements.

It is stated that the cruiser Askold, which has been in the water line, has been towed into the inner basin and beached. The battleship Sebastopol has a shell hole just above the water line and is useless in rough weather.
