BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS.
The above symptoms are not developed in any order but appear, disappear and reappear until the disease gradually gets a firm grasp on the constitution, the kidney-poisoned blood breaks down the nervous system, and finally pneumonia, diarrhoea, blood-spots, heart disease, apoplexy, paralysis or convulsions ensue, and then death is inevitable. This fearful disease is not a rare one—it is an every-day disorder, and claims more victims than any other complaint.

It must be treated in time or it will gain the mastery. Do not neglect it. Warner's SAFE Cure has cured thousands of cases of the worst type, and it will cure you if you will use it promptly and as directed. It is the only specific for the universal

THREE GOOD POINTS.

SWEARING FALSELY AGAINST CUNNINGHAM AND BURTON—EVIDENCE OF THE CHARGE BEING TRUMPED UP AGAINST THE ACCUSED.

LONDON, May 15.—Every seat to-day was occupied at the trial of the dynamiters at the Old Bailey. The judge entered, followed by Alderman Savery and Under Sheriff Metcalf, each bearing a bouquet like a prima donna. Twenty fashionable ladies gazed longingly at the flowers. The counsel on both sides looked pleased. The prisoners seemed undismayed.

The jury men do not look like men to be intimidated. They seem profoundly interested in the case. Each has paper and a quill pen and takes copious notes, one jurymen especially questioning witnesses for himself after the lawyers for the defence. It is believed that this inquisitiveness promises a disagreement of opinion. The prosecution will probably finish to-morrow, when the defence will begin, and occupy perhaps a day and a half. It is hoped that the case will go to the jury on Tuesday.

Three good points were made for the defence to-day. Several of the police who were on duty at the Tower on the day of the explosion were examined. One admitted that between the time when Cunningham visited the room where the explosion occurred and when the gates were closed ten minutes elapsed, and he could easily have gone out in the meantime. It had also been sworn before that Cunningham bought an overcoat at Shoreditch large enough to wear over his other overcoat, the theory being that he carried the dynamite to the Tower in that way. A sensation was caused in court when the prisoner asked to put on the greatcoat and it was found that it would not go over the smaller overcoat. On the contrary, it fitted him neatly when he laid not the smaller one on.

Again, about the detonator found in the coat, it was admitted by Inspector Albrerine that he did not find it till two days after the effects had been taken to the police station. The defence's general theory will be that anybody might have put the detonator there and that Cunningham was not in the Gower street train, but another man was, whose photograph was exhibited in court. The case is one of mistaken identity, they will say.

The defence will prove an alibi for Burton, and hope to show that he had no connection with any of the explosions. The prosecution tried to show that nobody but one gentleman and lady with a child got out of the Tower after the explosion took place and before the gates were closed. The defence elicited on cross-examination that many others got out. There still remain points against both prisoners, such as their equivocation when arrested, their having identified the bags, their failure to account for their movements, their inability to show reason for being in London. Solicitor Quilliam and Mr. Meany are most industrious workers for the prisoners' acquittal.

In the trial of Cunningham and Burton this morning Mary O'Brien, a newspaper vendor, swore Cunningham was in Miss Connor's lodging house where he had a room at the time of the explosion on the Metropolitan railway between Gower street and King's Cross. She sold Cunningham a newspaper at his lodging house on the night the explosion occurred and saw him there from 7.30 to 10 o'clock. The explosion occurred at 9 o'clock. Katherine White, who lives at Miss Connor's house, confirmed the testimony of Mary O'Brien. The counsel then submitted that no evidence had been adduced showing the existence of conspiracy. The judge declared the question must be decided by the jury.

THE REGISTRATION ACT.

LONDON, May 12.—In the House of Commons this afternoon on the motion of Mr. Lope (liberal-conservative) to insert a clause in the Registration act charging the expenses of registry on the general treasury being called up, Mr. Gladstone strongly opposed it. The motion was rejected by a vote of 280 to 258, a loss of ten votes by the government from last night's tally, and of but two for the opposition. The government's majority was obtained, it is thought, by a threat that they would resign if defeated. A number of liberals, who desired to abstain from voting, were compelled to vote on the appeal of the liberal whips. Mr. Gladstone announced his intention to introduce a bill to authorize a general election in November. The registration bill was read a third time.
