He said that as an Irishman he owed Charleston a debt of gratitude for contributions forwarded in the darker days of his country's history, and while discinarying that debt he desired to assure the people of America that the cause of Home Rule was neather, dead nor in danger of collapse. The British vote which it had polled in and out of the House was one of the most remarkable triumphs ever scored by a cause which bit yesterday had few friends in England, Scooland or Wales. Of its present chief opponents he said that Lord Hartington had the merit of consistency, which was more than could be said of Mr. Chamberlain, whose jealousy of Mr. Gladstone had been the source of his own destruction as a leader of Liberal thought. In telegraphic circles there is "something in the wind." On Monday Western Union Tele-graph stock was bought and sold on the New Work Exchange to the extent of nearly 150,000 shares, and that at an advance of 4 per cent, on last week's figures, bringing the stock up to 78 at the close. This "tremendous movement," as it is called, naturally started all sorts of rumors about telegraph affairs. In favor of a systematic scheme for the disposal of our sewage our citizens are unanimous, but their unanimity does not extend to anything which they do not understand. They certainly did not understand the scheme pronounced against yesterday, nor did its promoters take the proper steps to enlighten them thereupon. The people were largely left to judge for themselves, and their judgment was in favor of delay.
