There are some women who seem to be perennially youthful. The grown daughters are companions as well as children, and the color in the mother's cheeks, the brightness in her eyes, the roundness of her form, all speak of abounding health. What is her secret? She is at the middle age of life when he many women are worn, wastwhen so many women are worn, wasted and faded, and yet time has only ripened her charms. The secret of this matronly health and beauty may be told in the brief phrase, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The general health of woman is so intimately related to the local health of the defeate womanly organs, that where these are diseased, the whole body must suffer. "Favorite Prescription" dries the deblitating drains, heals ulceration and inflammation, cures female weakness and imparts to the delicate female organs natural vigor and vitality. Woman who have lost their health and their beauty have been made "robust and beauty have been made "robust and rosy cheeked" by the use of this mar-velous medicine.

Strange Run of Numbers.

The man with the underdone nose cast a glance of suspicion at the man with the incandescent whiskers.

"And," he mused, "I suppose they buried Ten Eycke in a grave ten feet deep and ten miles from nowhere, and the tender tendrils of ten of the tenderest vines are tentatively twining over his ten-year-old tomb."

Then the man with the incandescent whiskers ordered some ten-cent cigars and they smoked for ten minutes.—"Judge."

Victim of His Own Game.

Mrs. Potter Palmer's son Honore, who was married in August, once outwitted a concierge in Paris neatly.

A lad of sixteen or thereabout at the time, he was spending the winter in Paris with his mother. One cold night in February he stayed out unusually late, and, desiring to get in without awakening anyone, he rang up the concierge softly. The concierge, with equal softness, came downstairs. He whispered through the keyhole, "Is that you, M fellow."

The concierge instautly drew back the bolt. "Come in softly. Make no noise monsieur." he said shamelessly.

But young Palmer was already regretting the gold louis—his last one. A thought struck him, and he had no sooner entered than he said:

"Oh, by the way, I left a book on the stone balustrade outside. Do you mind getting it for me?"

With great politeness the concierge, in his bare feet, tiptoed out upon the cold

The Physician. A popular impression prevails that the physician, by reason of the privileges conferred upon him by the state, is, in the absence of an adequate reason for not so doing, required to respond to all calls to reader professional services. This is clearly erroneous, except where the physician has already undertaken the treatment of the case er except where he is an efficer of the government charged with specific duties which he thereby violates.
