

"I have greatly enjoyed the perusal of 'THE ART OF SERMON ILLUSTRATION.' It is full of light. To read it is not only to get illustrations ready made, but to be guided in the art of using them and put in the way of getting more. I am sure preachers will find it most useful and well worth purchasing."—REV. PROF. KILPATRICK, D.D., KNOX College.

The Art of Sermon Illustration

By H. JEFFS

Editor of "The Christian World Pulpit"

A BOOK FOR PREACHERS and SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

Large Crown 8vo, Cloth Boards, Gilt Top, $1.25 Postpaid

The author, starting from the principle that the average mind craves for stories and similes, shows how the most successful method of presenting spiritual truths has always been the method of illustration.

He discusses the general principles of illustration, keeping always in view the means of interesting and impressing people of the present day, and indicates how the preacher or teacher may draw effective illustrations from common life, from fiction and poetry, and from science and industry.

Something like 300 illustrations selected from a wide range of reading of sermons and general literature are included, with a large number of original illustrations, and illustrated sermon outlines and outlines of addresses to children add to the usefulness of a thoroughly up-to-date book.

Indices of the texts illustrated, and of the subjects of the illustrations, will be of the greatest service to the preacher preparing sermons, and the teacher preparing lessons.

"The general principles of illustration, the best methods to copy, and the most glaring faults to avoid are well expounded in this book. The volume can hardly fail to prove of the utmost value to sermon-makers."—SCOTSMAN.

"Here is a book which every man whose task it is to address his fellows will do well to buy and read. Not a chapter of this book but contains wise counsel, clearly expressed. Lay preachers especially will do well to master it, and some whose office it is to make sermons week by week will be the better for its perusal. We warmly welcome Mr. Jeffs' latest volume."—SUNDAY STRAND.

"It is a valuable production, which should prove of immense benefit to the preacher who wishes to preach effectively, whether old or young. The speaker at men's meetings will also find it most useful. It is much more than a book of choice illustrations, it is a complete lectureship on the value, sources, and uses of illustrative matter."—THE SCOTTISH CONGREGATIONALIST.

"Mr. H. Jeffs' latest work, 'THE ART OF SERMON ILLUSTRATION' written for the preacher, goes with a swing which carries the reader with it, so that he rises unwearied from its perusal, having acquired a fund of useful suggestion, together with an assurance of possibilities of greater accessions of capacity to interest on a more particular study. The book cannot fail to be of the utmost use to the speaker, no matter what his denomination, especially to him whose duty it is to address the young and less educated classes."—MANCHESTER COURIER.

"Mr. Jeffs has given of his best and wisest in the extraordinarily useful volume before me. His chapters simply reek with illustrations, and on almost every page the preacher and teacher will find what some of us want so much, apt and striking picture-windows for our sermons and talks to the bairns."—REV. W. KINGSCOTE GREENLAND in "The Young Man."

"In short, the book is thoroughly practical and competent: it is fresh and interesting all through, and it ought to be in the hands of every preacher. The writer is in touch with the twentieth century, and has not lost touch of the first."—W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, D.D., in "The British Weekly."
