T WAS the middle of the night (as I thought) when Savory—my man, my landlord, valet and general factorum—came in and woke me. He gave me a letter, saying simply, "The gentleman's a-waiting, sir," and I read it twice, without understanding it in the very least.

Could it be a hoax? To satisfy myself I sat up in bed, rubbed my astonished and still half sleepy eyes and read it again. It ran as follows:

I found there a prim, little, old-young I found there a prim, little, old-young gentleman, who scanned me curiously through his gold rimmed pince nez. Although, no doubt, greatly surprised-for he did not quite expect to see an archmillionaire in an old ulster with a ragged collar of catskin, with damp, unkempt locks and unshorn chin at that time of day—he addressed me with much formality and respect.
"I must apologize for this intrusion, Captain Wood."

Captain Wood.—you are Captain Wood?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Undoubtedly."

"I am Mr. Quinlan, very much at your service. Pardon me—is this your dog? Is he quite to be trusted?"

"Perfectly, If you don't speak to him. Lie down, Roy! I fear I am very late—a ball last night. Do you ever go to balls, Mr. Quinlan?"

"Not often, Captain Wood. But if I have come too early I can call later on."

"By no means. I am dying to hear nore. But first of all, this letter. It's all bons fide, I suppose?"

"Without question. It is from our firm. There can be no possible mistake. We have made it our business to verify all the facts—indeed, this is not the first we had heard of the affair—but we did not think it right to speak to you too soon. This morning, however, the unail has brought a full acknowledgment of your claims, so we came on at once to see you."

"How did you find me out, pray?"

"We have had our eye on you for some time past. Captain Wood," said the little lawyer smilingly. "While we were luquiring—you understand—we were anxious to d the best for you."— sheets of tissue paper; also a number of cuttings from the New York press.

The early part of the letter referred to the search and discovery of the helitat-law (myself) and stated frankly that there could be no sort of doubt that my case was clear and that they would be pleased, when called upon, to put me in full presession of my estate.

From that they passed on to a brief-enumeration of the assets, which comprised real estate in fown lots, lands, houses, stocks, shares, well placed investments of all kinds, part ownership of a lucrative "road." or railway; the controlling power in shipping companies, coal companies, cable companies, and mining companies in all parts of the United States.

AT THE INTELLIGENCE OFFICE.

As I left the bank, where I had been most cordially received, with my sovereign purse full and the nice crisp notes for £250 carefully put by in my pockethook, I began at last to believe in my fortune. There is a solid, unmistakable reality in the chink of good gold, while the supple civility of the great financiers, who had so lately
looked black at my overdrawn account, proved how completely my position
was changed.

The morning's adventures and surprises had occupied much time, and itwas now getting late; past noon, in fact. We members of the "intelligence" made it a point of honor to be in good time at the office-an hour or more earlier than this. It had hardly occurred to me that I need not go to the office at all. You see, I had been some 13 years under discipline and not many hours an archmillionaire. Besides, there is such a thing as esprit de corps.
I was a public servant, engaged in responsible work, and I could not, would not, have neglected it willingly; no, not for the wealth of the Indies.

Friends I passed saw it plainly on my face and ralled me on my beaming looks and buogrant demeanor. They had not left me when I walked through the swinging doors of Sykes & Sarsfield's bank. I was no longer the humble suppliant for a plitful overdraft, but the possessor of a fine balance, who could hold his head high Roy usually waited years of the same array opportunity of coming over to look into things for himself. head. I was now on the headquarters staff, with an appointment in the intelligence department, and I found people were very kind; shoals of invitations came in, and I accepted everything—balls, dinners, routs. I went everywhere on the chance of meeting Frida Fairholme, at whose feet I had failen the very first day we met. I worked hard at the office, but I played hard, too, making the most of my time, of my means, which, unhapply, did not go far. Four or five hundred a year is not exactly affluence for a careless young soldier, with a war office appointment, aping the ways of a finished man about town. Gloves, buttonholes and cab fares swallowed up half of It, and with the other half I had hardly been able to keep out of debt.

That, at least, and without looking further, was all over now.

Savory had suffered more than once from the narrowness of my budget, but he had been very good and patient, and I was glad to think he would be the first to benefit by my good fortune.

"Would you like your money?" I asked as I buttoped up my cont and made ready to start for the office, a little late in the day.
