UNCOMFORTABLE QUESTION

"In view of the impressive defeat of the Russians," says the Detroit Tribune, "the uncomfortable question arises: Would any other white army be a match for the fierce little fighters of Japan ?"

It is an uncomfortable question. It was generally supposed that although Japan proved surprisingly strong in naval battles, she would be over-whelmed on land. But on land Japan has been quite as successful as on the sea, and the huge Russian armies have been crumpled up, and so persistently kept on the move that Kuropatkin does not seem to have had an opportunity for three months to know with certainty just how his forces were disposed at any one time. The Japs have never let up long enough to permit the Russians to the hammer and tongs variety. At Manila Admiral Dewey piped all hands to breakfast in the middle of the battle. The whole Japanese army has, more than once, fought continuously for twenty-four hours without food or sleep, and in the victory of Liaoyang the engagement was maintained almost incessantly for ten days. The Russians were given no rest-no opportunity to rally and reorganize. When the great Russian army moved from Liaoyang the tireless Japs pushed from behind and from both sides, and kept the huge body rolling with such momentum that it rolled over and past Mukden, where it was expected to plant itself for a battle. The Japanese, having won at Liaoyang, had no further use for Liaoyang. They did not even pause to count gains and losses. The Japs are fierce little fighters. They fight to kill, and in killing are willing to be killed.

would be a match for the Japanese would depend, we should say, on the issue. In this campaign the Japs have the advantage of a blazing enthusiasm which infects every man in the ranks. They seek to win or die. They are not making the leisurely war customary in Europe since the introduction of repeating rifles and deadly They make the primordial fight, they seek the victory and do not begrudge the cost. It is not a tedious game of chess between strategists, manoeuvering for bloodless victories, according to the scientific theories of the game of war, but close grips and grim results. Were Japan make herself the aggressor, to invade one of the nations of Europe, to carry her men to a war that did not affect their homes and their hopes-were they facing an army that had homes to defend, and that had studied Japanese methods in this war, the result might be different. For her first great fight Japan made the most careful preparations, while Russia, over-estimating herself, neglected

Surely if the election was won by corrupt practices some information would have leaked out in all that time, yet prominent Liberals have assured us that they had not heard even the rumor charge.

The Toronto News Independent says that public opinion in Canada is so sluggish as to be well nigh dead as regards public abuses and mismanagement. Of course the party papers are blamed. But if public opinion is dead it will certainly not be resuscitated by the see-sawing of the alleged "independent" newspapers. These publications bask complacently in the sunshine of their self-constituted superiority and dam both political do they create a new party to save the country. If the "independent" papers of Canada were truly independent they would not hedge and straddle the fence as they do for fear of offending one or other of the two great parties but would take one side or the other and cast the weight of their influence with the better of the two Tor the general good. It is all rot for them to say that both parties are too bad to have anything to do with. The "independent" papers age no better than the better party of the two. parties but they offer no remedy nor

GRAND BAND

Magnificent Program Presented in Chatham by the Black Watch-Mr. Scane Complimented.

The Black Watch Band, whose visit visit to Chatham has been expectantly looked forward to for some time by the Maple City's many music lovers, gave their concert in the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon to a good sized house.

The program was a select one and every number was rendered in an artistic and finished manner. The Black Watch Band is a good one—one of the best that hos visited Chatham for some time, and they were given a very hearty reception.

The audience was not composed entirely of Chathamites. There were musicians present from all oyer the County and none of them were disappointed with the music rendered. The reputation of the Black Watch Band has gone before it and yester-

One of the treats of the concert was the national Fantasia "Under the British Flag," which infroduced a number of patriotic songs repre-sentative of every British colony. It was indeed an excellent selection and keenly enjoyed. The reminiscences from operas-Wagner, arranged by Godfrey, was also a favorite with the audience. Every number on the program was enthusiastically received and each time an encore was called for. The bandmaster, E. T. Murray, was very gracious, and each time he responded to the wishes of his audience

Another decidedly artistic number was the clarinet solo, "Les Alsochien-nes," by soloist Corporal Turbett. Mr. Turbett seems to have complete

The electric light at the corner of the propagal with the proposition of the program which struck the hearts of the many old Scotchmen present were the bag spipes and the Scotch dancing. The Black Watch have probably the best pipers band in the world, and when pipers band in the world, and when they played and marched through the house in their imposing costumes it was with difficulty that many of the sons of old Scotia kept their seats. The pipers were cheered and applauded, and if the audience had had their wish they would have appeared often-er. The dancing in costume was of the very finest order and brought forth many evidences of delight and forth many evidences of delight and appreciation.

The Scotch selections by the band were given in a manner which only a Scotch band can give them, and there was no one in the audience who was ready to depart when the program was over. The band would not have tired their audience if the program had been twice as long.

Mr. W. W. Scane, who brought the band here at much expense, deserves to be complimented for affording the people of Chatham such a worthy and high class attraction. Mr. Scane has brought many an excellent enhas brought many an excellent en-tertainment to the city and he seems to be getting better attractions each time. The visit of the Black Watch Band will not be easily forgotten in Chatham.
