Has Your Opinion Passed Such Resolution?

In order to benefit ourselves individually and as a union, the white ribbons of the W. C. T. U. of Arrowhead Park and Okoboji, Iowa, have passed the following resolutions:

Believing that gossip is one of the worst of evils and the common cause of man's contention towards man, we are

Resolved that slander against one's character, true or untrue, shall not be laid at our door.

That we will not listen to idle gossip.

That we will not repeat detrimental reports unless necessary.

That we will not be inquisitive as to affairs to learn about which might create slander and gossip.

That we will not cast reflections upon any by either tone or gesture.

That we will guard against unkind insinuations that may hurt one's feelings.

That we will teach the children to abhor gossip and exaggeration and not allow them to tell tales out of school.

That we will suspend judgment until we know the truth.

Thoughts of a Housekeeper.

(Josiah Allen's Wife)
I have a very great respect and admiration for the sadly tried President of our country and feel sincere pity and sympathy for him because of the heavy burden he is bearing so bravely. And usually I am very proud of my country, of its immense resources, its giant stables in invention, art, commerce, wealth - proud to picture it as leading all other nations in true democracy - and have been wont to consider it the Light of the World.

But the recent acts of some of our law-makers on prohibition and woman suffrage remind me of Pecksniff as presented by the immortal Dickens who, while very drunk and being helped upstairs, preached moral lessons to his panting helpers and adjured them to 'Peruse and reflect on life.'

At this time when America, the very center and fountain head of democracy, is draining the country of happiness and wealth to carry into foreign fields its ideal of democracy (as we all say Amen to it) by its failure to pass the Federal amendment law it is denying democracy to half the people of the land. While Austria, New Zealand and other countries have given suffrage to their women, America still stands on the brink and hesitates. While other nations have banished intoxicating drink - even tea, tortured Russia gives up its vodka - our country still allows liquor to be sold in the market place.

And while the government sends out daily and hourly appeals to careworn housekeepers to conserve every particle of flour and sugar - It squanders millions and millions of pounds of the precious grains and priceless sweets to be wasted, and worse than wasted in making something that destroys life and property, when truly it would seem that the nation as this

A Newspaper Clipping

By SUSAN CLAGETT
(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Hugh McInnis sorted his papers rapidly, pausing for an instant to look at the superscription upon a small square envelope, the handwriting of which he did not recognize. This he laid aside for the moment for more pressing business and then forgot it.

This was strange, for it was an incident thing, lying as it did alone upon the desk in front of him. Once his eyes fell upon it and he stretched out his hand to take it up but was interrupted and not until he left the office, hours later, was he conscious that the letter was still unread.

He picked it up and slipped it into his pocket, thinking to read it at his leisure and again it was forgotten. Yet he was neither a careless nor forgetful man, but at this time he was absorbed by an important case that claimed all his energy and attention. Besides this, he believed it to be an invitation which he had no time to accept.

Two months later as he was passing the White House he collided with a woman in white who had suddenly stopped in his path to read the suffrage book held aloft by a very tired-looking girl. With an apology he was about to pass on, when he caught a side view of the face under the broad-brimmed hat. "You," he said, stopping short and holding out his hand. "I thought you were in California."

"I was until two months ago," Mary Bowls answered, "and it is good to be back, even if my throat does contract with an ache every time a uniform passes me. War seemed farther away out there but here, where almost every other man you meet is in khaki, it is very near."

"Yes," he said, looking at her with appreciative eyes, "living in Washington we are in the midst of things and the war is brought very close to us. I suppose we forget it for a time. Come and take lunch with me. I know a place where they give you wonderful rolls and a delicious salad. That is, of course, unless you prefer a hotel."

"My tastes are still simple," she replied with a laugh. "Rolls and salad sound good to a hungry woman."

"It is rather a shabby little place," he answered, almost in apology.

"What matter? Washington is a city of extremes. Two blocks up the avenue from the White House, there is shabbiness indeed. Walk down Seventh street until you reach the Corcoran Art gallery. What do you pass? Gently, nothing more until you come to the wonderful group of buildings further on. That is the one thing about Washington - its strong contrasts."

"I did not bring you to lunch to talk about contrasts and extremes. I want to hear about yourself. Why didn't you let me know you were in town?"

"Don't you read the daily papers?" she asked carelessly. "I believe I was announced even to the details of my traveling dress, which was an old one, by the way, and did not deserve notoriety."

"I never read the society news and frivolity does not sit well upon you, my dear young lady. What reason did you have for not sending me your card?"

"Are you sure I did not?"

"Quite sure. It would have reached me if you had sent it."

"I forgot your address and did not think to look in the directory. You can give it to me now, if you will."

"Why not? It is the best I can think of on the spur of the moment," she returned lightly.

"Why should there be a reason?" he asked again.

"Why do you always look for one?" she countered back. "Think of it as a woman's whim."

"Neither whim nor frivolity becomes you," he replied shortly, "but I will give you my card."

He drew a fat case from his pocket and, not finding what he wanted, laid several papers upon the table. Uppermost on the pile was the unopened letter received two months before.

Mary Bowls's eyes widened, then became expressionless as she glanced from it to her companion, still searching for his elusive card.

"I forgot it," he said simply. "It reached me when I was absorbed in an important case. Of course it was unbecomingly late to read it when I had leisure, but whenever I started to open it I was interrupted. If you will pardon me I will look over it now."

"Let it wait. An hour or so will now make little difference to your correspondent."

"I have never corresponded with a woman in my life, and I doubt if this is anything more important than an invitation."

She placed a hand over the letter, still lying on the table. "Just a little longer," she said softly. "There is no telling what news it may contain and you may wish you had read it alone."

He shook his head as he slit the envelope. "I will not have it long," he said.

As he opened the sheet he found it blank. Curiously he further unfolded it and a newspaper clipping dropped upon the table. It fell right side up.

The clerk can get a good dinner out of a man and the man can get a good dinner out of a clerk. It all depends on which one gets the other first. In either case it is fair eating or the one who gets the dinner.

A Newspaper Clipping

He placed it beside the envelope and studied the two. His glance again fell upon the printed slip which, after a moment's hesitation, he read aloud:

"Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bowie announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary, to Mr. William Berkeley. The wedding will take place in the early fall."

For a time he looked absently at the clipping, then his eyes sought and held her gaze. Over and over he read the printed words, then raised his eyes to the girl's face.

"You were right. It does contain news. It is a very interesting clipping. I have never seen your handwriting. Did you direct this?"

For answer she took a pencil and scrawled her name and address upon it. He placed it in his pocket and studied the two. His glance again fell upon the printed slip which, after a moment's hesitation, he read aloud:

Unexaggerated Fishing

YOU should read this story. Usually a fishing trip is a very pleasant one for most people who take it, but this one deals with dry and mountains and ripples. So you see it is different from the ordinary fishing trip where the young hero goes forth with a fishhook and catches the fish.

It was a fine day and the sun shined brightly from all parts of the world had cast in profane vein. It is all right to tell about fishing on a boat, but this one deals with dry and mountains and ripples. So you see it is different from the ordinary fishing trip where the young hero goes forth with a fishhook and catches the fish.
