A Song of Fleeting Love.

(From The Century.) Love has wings as light as a bird,
Guileless he looks, as a dove of wrong;
Whatever his song, be it brief or long,
It still has this for an overword:

Love has wings!

Though to-day the truant may stay.
Though he woes and sues and sings,
Only sorrow to maids he brings;
Pout him and flout him, laugh him away
Love has wings!

Hold your pulses calm, unstirred— Calm and cool as a woodland pool, Let not his song your heart befool; List, through it all, for the overword: Alice Williams Brotherlon.

Strange Case of Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

"Thank you sir," said Poole, with a note of something like triumph in his voice: and taking up his candle, he led Mr. Utterson back across the yard and into the great kitchen, where the fire was out and the beetles were leaping on the floor.

"It is well, then, that we should be frank," said the other. "We Pooles this is rather a wild tale, into man," said Mr. Utterson, biting lifs finger. "Suppose it were as yon suppose, supposing Dr. Jekyll to have been—well, murdered, what fits finger. "Suppose it you suppose, supposing Dr. Jekyll to have been—well, murdered, what could induce the murderer to stay? That won't hold water; it doesn't commend itself to reason."

"Well, sir, it went so quick, and the creature was so doubled up, that I could hardly swear to that," was the answer. "But if you mean, was it Mr. Hyde?—why, yes, I think it was! You see, it was much of the same bigness; and it had the same bigness; and it had the same quick, light way with it; and who else could have got in by hard man to satisfy, but I'll do it I was: You see, it was much of yet," said Poole. "All this last week (you must know) him, or it, or whatever it is lives in that cabinet, has been crying night and day for some sort of medicine and cannot get it to his mind. It was sometimes his way—the master's, that is—to write his orders on a sheet of paper and throw it on the stair. We've had nothing else this week back; nothing but papers and spoke with him." I way in Yea," said the lawyer, "I once spoke with him."

"I thought it looked like it." said and taking the poker under his arm,

Blank silence followed, no one protesting; only the maid lifted up her voice and now wept loudly.

"Hold your tongue!" Poole said to her, with a ferocity of accent that testified to his own jangled nerves; and indeed, when the girl had so suddenly raised the note of her lamentation, they had all started and turned towards the inner door with faces of dreadful expectation. "And now," continued the butler, addressing the knife-boy, "reach me a candle, and we'll get this through on hands at once," And then be begged Mr. Utterson to follow him, and led the way to the back garden.

"Now, sir," said he, "you come as gently as you can. I want you to hear, and I don't want you to be heard. And see here, sir, if by any chance he was to ask you in, don't go."

Mr. Utterson's nervee, at this un-chance he was to ask you in, don't go."

Mr. Utterson's nerves, at this unlooked-for termination, gave a jerk that nearly threw him from his balance; but he recollected his courage and followed the butler into the laboratory building and through the surgical theatre, with its lumber of crates and bottles, to the foot of the stair. Here Poole motioned him to stand on one side and listen; while he himself, setting down the candle and making a great and obvious call on his resolution, mounted the steps and knocked with a somewhat uncertain hand on the red baize of the cabinet door,

"Mr. Utterson's nerves, at this unhour distingtion was not my master, and there's the truth. My master"—here he looked breath to where that patient foot was as till, fine build of a man, and this was more of a dwarf."

Utterson attempted to protest. "O, sir," cried Poole, "do you think I do not know where his head comes to in the sabinet door, where I saw him every morning of my life? No, sir, that thing in the mask was never Doctor Jekyll; and it is the belief of my heart that there was murder done."

"Poole," replied the lawyer, "if where the patient to where that patient foot was astill going up and down, up and down, in the quiet of the night.

"Jekyll," cried Utterson, with a loud voice, "I demand to see you." He paused a moment, but there came no reply. "I give you fair warning, our suspicions are aroused, and I must and shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul must sand they down, in the quiet of t

"Mr. Utterson, sir, asking to see you," he called; and even as he did so, once more, violently signed to the lawyer to give ear.

"A voice answered from within:

"Tell him I cannot see any one," it there was murder done."

"Poole," replied the lawyer, "if you say that, it will become my duty to make certain. Much as I desire to spare your-master's feelings, much as I am puzzled by this note which seems to prove him to be still the dangerous stove out of the rail-way car. Recent experiments have beach in that door."

"That's it!" said Pcole. "It was this way. I came suddenly into the theatre from the garden. It seems he had slipped out to look for this drug or whatever it is; for the cabinet door was open, and there he was at the far end of the room digging among the crates. GEORGE FRASER, Esq., Agent, Halifax.

DEAR SIR—I was induced by one of your agents to try your Manhattan Condinent. Although I had plittle faith in it, I took one 10 lb. bag to try as an experiment. I fed it according to directions to cow that was giving milk. At the end of the first week we found an improvement, and for the past weeks she has steadily improved in quantity of milk and also in quality; her general appearance has improved, and I should be unwilling to be without the Condinent, for I believe it to be a valuable for diet.

Yours truly,
